We embark on a new era . . . From the graceful Gothic and soaring spires to the structural steel and stone, to the granite and glass, we build. From the stained glass of Bapst, capturing the heritage of our Western culture and tradition, to the dormitory windows overlooking the campus and the city beyond, we house the students who make this university ever-new, who are its life-blood, who grow intellectually, culturally, spiritually . . . Buildings which will live as ageless memories of those who traversed their halls and discovered within them new experiences toward a greater maturity.

For a freshman, as for a senior, a new year means new faces and new friends . . . For the commuter, the beginning of the daily trek to the Heights from Boston and its suburbs. Or the arrival of the resident students by plane, train, and car to a new atmosphere of study and excitement. The journey from points north, south, and west—from Portland to Puerto Rico, from Springfield to San Francisco. Or from points east and southeast, across the Atlantic . . . A campus ever-changing because its students are ever-changing in origin, experience, and view-point. A university with a community, national, and international character and challenge.

We learn, not through isolation, but through association with others . . . The professor at the classroom podium or the students in a seminar, sharing with each other the fruits of individual thought and research. Or in the laboratory, learning through experimentation. The lecturer in science or the humanities, broadening the horizon of our vision and understanding. Shelf upon shelf of books, each one assuming a new vitality and worth as a fresh mind garners new meaning from its words . . . Things which are renewed each year as new minds begin their search for the wisdom which comes with maturity.

Social life on the Heights . . . From the Freshman Class Mixer during Orientation Week to the Commencement Ball in McElroy four years later, a steady pace of new faces and acquaintances joining in a round of relief from the rigors of books and more books. The Victory Dance after the game, the prom at a neighboring country club or in the plush ballroom of a downtown hotel. Junior Week with its musical comedy, "Bye Bye Birdie", and its concert featuring the Kingston Trio, or Winter Weekend with its Mardi Gras Ball. Then Senior Week . . . and the fond good-byes and cherished memories of new and lasting friends.

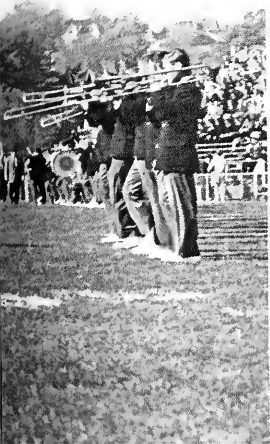

The unifying spirit which athletic events contribute to Boston College . . . The team spirit and determination "to excel" which are the passwords for all those engaged in competitive sports. The thrill of the crowd in cheering a new team onto victory in its premier showing on the home field. The new look the girls bring to cheerleading on the Heights. The color of the festivities at halftime. The reverent strains as alumni join with students in singing "Hail!" to their Alma Mater . . . The rivalry of a basketball game at Roberts, the excitement of hockey in McHugh, or of the Beanpot Tourney at the Boston Garden.

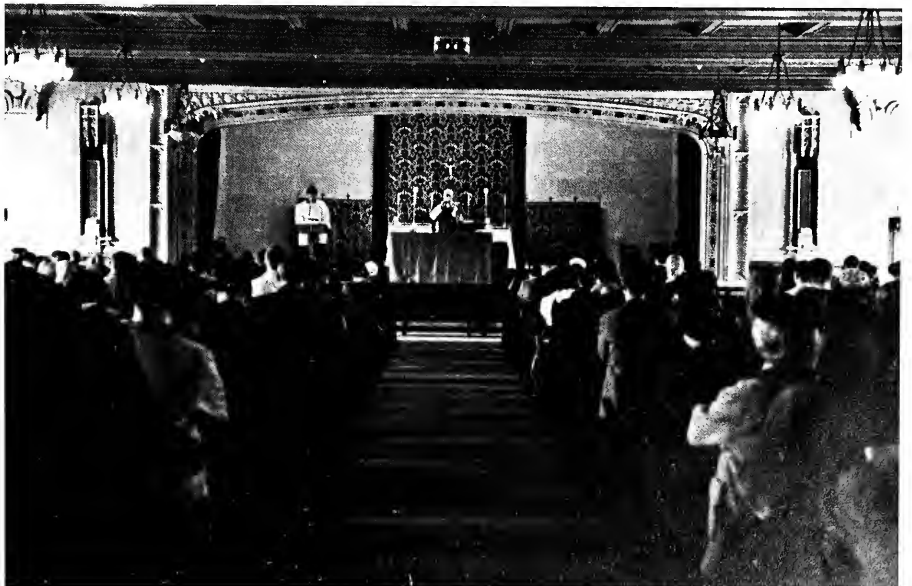

We embark on an era of liturgical renewal, of re-emphasis on the participation of the layman. . . . The corporate act of worship, binding us in a unity of purpose and direction. A speech by a Hans Küng, or a Gustave Weigel, to signal a new openness and frankness, a new understanding in the discussion of theological questions. The increased necessity of positive action, a sign of the vitality of the "new creature", of the "new man" . . . The challenge of the individual Christian to commit himself to fulfillment—his own and others. The challenge to the university and to the nation

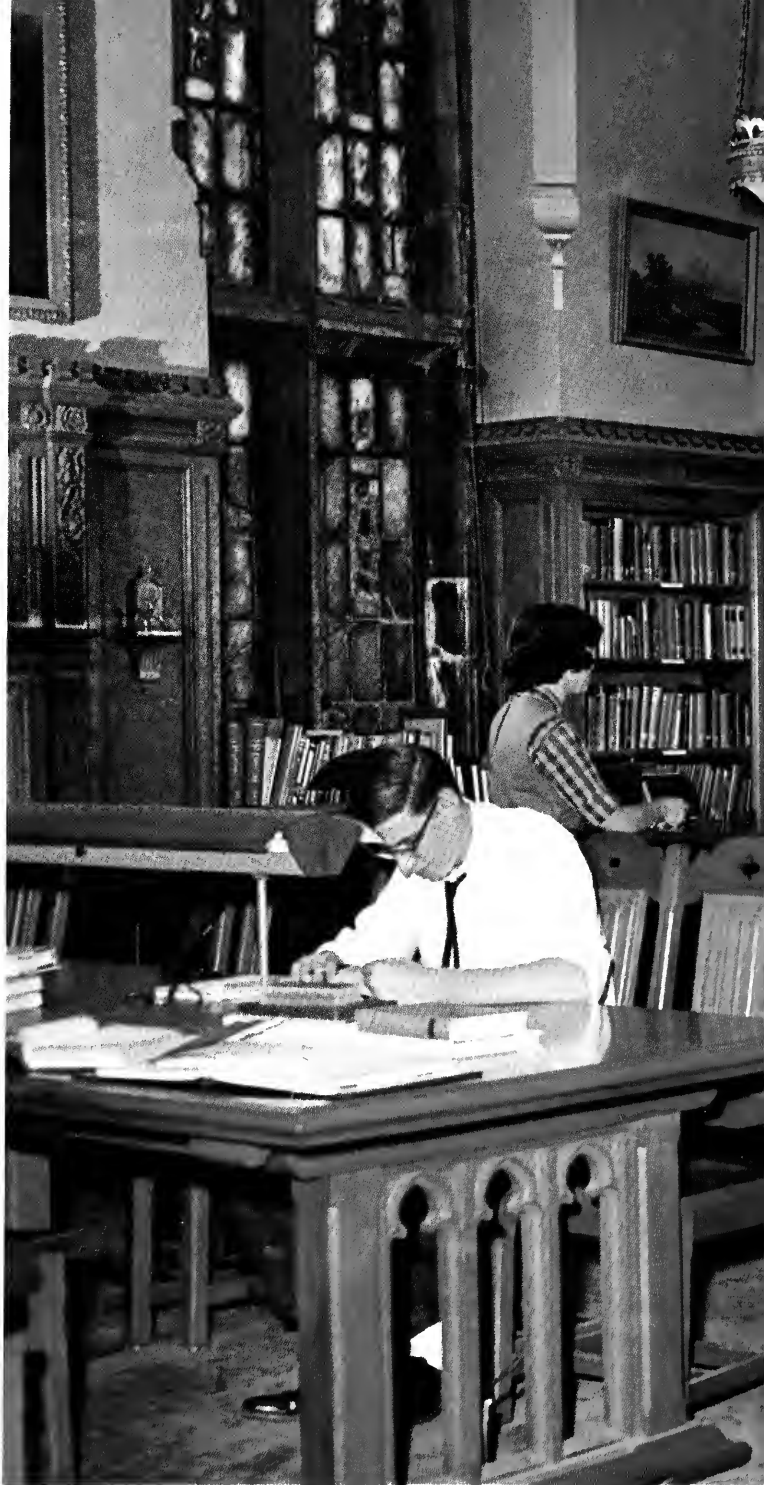

“Men can no longer know everything themselves; the 20th century has no universal man. All men today must know through one another to judge across their own ignorance—to comprehend at second hand. These arts are not easily learned. Those who would practice them must develop intensity of perception, variety of mental activity, and the habit of open concern for truth in all its forms. Where can we expect to find a training ground for this modern maturity, if not in our universities?”

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

To the Class of 1964:

It is a pleasant duty to write a personal word of greeting to the Class of 1964. Your Class has been distinguished for its devotion to Alma Mater and for its faithful discharge of the tasks of academic training. While we congratulate you for your genuine preoccupation with those humanistic studies, we assure you of our boundless confidence that the strategy of life which you have plotted in your university years will direct you into paths of godly integrity and sacrificial allegiance to duty.

Each graduating class adds its portion to the heritage of Boston College. Yours has been a generous and enthusiastic participation in all the academic and social concerns that make up the fabric of university life.

While I set my hand and seal, as President of Boston College, to your academic letters of credence, I promise you my prayers and beg God's blessing on you through all the days of your years.

PHILOSOPHY

In its position as a core subject at an institute of Catholic education, the Department of Philosophy has spent most of the past year engaged in a "self-examen" to discover if it cannot better rise up to and meet the challenge presented by contemporary thought.

The last three years have found the Department coming to the "reasoned realization" that twenty-seven semester hours of philosophy seriously hamper the efficacy of the undergraduate program where greater depth and concentration is required in the major field. So, very wisely, the Department has been slowly re-organizing and consolidating its position under the direction of Rev. Frederick J. Adelman, S.J.

This past year, the pilot plan (developed during the last two years for the A&S Honors Program) of condensing Metaphysics and Rational Psychology into two one-semester courses given in junior year has been expanded to reach the whole College of Arts and Sciences. More of this concentration can be expected in the future, eventually narrowing the philosophy requirement to four one-semester courses.

To broaden the scope of its vision, an ever-increasing number of lay professors has been hired by the Department as it has kept pace with the current University expansion.

THEOLOGY

The academic year now nearing completion has been one of ferment for the Theology Department. The Department, under the Chairmanship of Rev. James J. Casey, S.J., is in the midst of curriculum changes which will probably lead to four three-credit required courses in theology, more electives, and new teaching approaches (non-apologetic) next year.

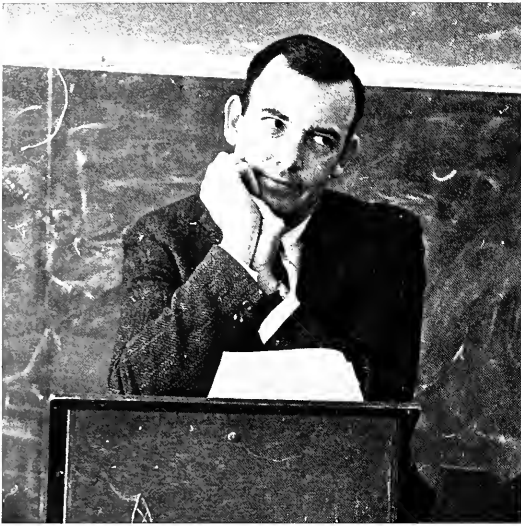

A step toward revamping has been made this year in the second semester course for the Senior Honors students in Arts and Sciences: the usual two semesters of Sacramental Theology were condensed into a one-semester course. This has freed the second semester, then, for a lecture-series course centered on problems facing "The Church in the Modern World," given by members of the B.C. faculty and invited speakers. The purpose of the lectures—which proved enormously successful and popular—was to orientate the knowledge received in formal theology courses to problems the students will face as educated Catholic laymen.

The teaching of English in the liberal arts college is a singularly important and difficult task. Not only must the Department be geared to the greatest possible concentration of courses for the student intending to pursue graduate study in English, but it must also serve the varied needs of students in every other department of the University in the development of their reading and writing skills.

The goal of the Department of English, then, as envisioned by its Chairman, John L. Mahoney, and his colleagues engaged in "the profession of English," is to be a truly "student-centered department." To meet this challenge, "teachers are sought who have a broad humanistic background along with strength in an individual area of English literature, and"—what is of greatest importance to every department on campus—"who are willing to work with the students."

Among the projected changes in the Department, especially to better prepare the English major for graduate work, are seminars and a senior thesis for honors students majoring in English and comprehensive examinations in senior year. "The courses," says Dr. Mahoney, who is also currently serving as Chairman of the Arts and Sciences Self-Study, "are to be more than a communication of information; the student must be challenged to advance new ideas."

With the initiation of "New History," a critical approach to history on the high school level, the future undergraduate history major will enter college with a greater degree of sophistication and background. As a result, our History Department has been working out possible new programs that might maintain a high level of challenge and achievement for the student.

Next year, a pilot plan for required survey courses will be initiated. This program will consist of lectures to large classes by departmental and invited history professors, reinforced with smaller seminars where the students will discuss problems and questions brought out in the lectures.

Dr. Thomas H. O'Connor, Department Chairman, feels this program will accomplish three objectives: first, it will give competent instruction uniformly to a large number of students; second, this program, in freeing professors from the burden of teaching individual survey courses, will allow the Department to organize new electives in the given professor's particular field; and third, the students, arranged under the direction of a teaching fellow in seminar-type courses of 18-20 members meeting once every week, will receive a greater amount of personal attention. All this is being done in an effort to uplift both the quality of the material taught and the quality of the teaching itself.

MATHEMATICS

That the Mathematics Department, headed by Rev. Stanley J. Bezuska, S.J. and Dr. Joseph A. Sullivan, is continuing to exhibit rapid advancement in its field is evidenced by the quality of its recognition and its far-reaching fame. For the sixth consecutive year, the Department received mention by the National Science Foundation for the high quality of its work; also, a grant from the N.S.F. aids the well-known teacher-training institute originated by the Department. To this is coupled the support of the United States Air Force in departmental research projects.

On the undergraduate level, several innovations have been made; advanced courses dealing with the theoretical aspects of mathematics have been augmented by courses dealing with such practical subjects as computer programming and actuarial mathematics. The Department expects to expand the size of its faculty and the number of its courses and to institute a doctoral program in the near future.

FINE ARTS

Since no man can claim to be "liberally-educated" unless he has at least a basic knowledge and understanding of the place of art and music in the life of man and his society throughout history, a Fine Arts Department is integral in the very conception of a liberal arts college. No longer are the offerings here at Boston College, however, confined to the domain of required courses in music and art appreciation.

With the size of the Department nearly doubled in recent years under the Chairmanship of Dr. Ferdinand L. Roussève, numerous elective courses are now given to students interested in the field of fine arts. The appointment of an "artist-in-residence" has led to the establishment of courses of a practical nature, and it is expected that undergraduate degrees in art may be granted in the near future.

MILITARY SCIENCE

The key idea which has directed every activity of the Military Science Department this year has been a new and emphatic determination to make R.O.T.C. more a part of student life. The aim of the instructors this year has been to produce superior leaders by maintaining a proper balance between class work and drill. And the use of training aids in the classroom lectures has made learning more interesting and informative.

The administrative control of the Cadet Brigade became the almost exclusive responsibility of the students themselves; a separate brigade office and headquarters was established, and such matters as the promotion of underclassmen were handled by the cadet officers. Also established was a Non-commissioned Officers' Academy to prepare the Juniors for summer camp.

Among R.O.T.C. activities, the Lewis Drill Team, in new uniforms, had continued competitive success. The Rifle Team considerably increased its collection of trophies, while the Cadet Officers' Club adopted a new constitution which provides a wider field of activity by the Club.

INTER-DEPARTMENTAL PROGRAMS

Lawrence G. Jones, Ph.D.
Secretary, Slavic Studies

To understand a civilization and its people, something more is required than courses in only one discipline or field of study. Rather, it is necessary to cross the bounds of departmental specialization and voyage in many diverse streams of thought. Recognizing the growing need for preparing students and future scholars in the totality of a culture or civilization, a number of Inter-Departmental Programs have been established under the Chairmanship of Rev. John A. McCarthy, S.J., Dean of Arts and Sciences.

Specifically, these are Asian Studies, offering courses in Chinese, in the Intellectual History of China and India, and in Asian and Oriental Literature, Government, and Politics; Latin-American Studies, with courses in history, economics, and literature; and Slavic Studies, stressing intensive study of the Russian Language and Literature.

BIOLOGY

Biological sciences are becoming increasingly involved with their sister sciences—mathematics, physics, and chemistry. As this interbreeding of the sciences continues, the Department of Biology at Boston College is keeping abreast, if not often far ahead, of the current developments in the field. These new biological studies are an evolution from the classical microscopic biology to the molecular concepts of the present era.

Reflecting these changes are many specific advances which will directly affect the student opportunities at Boston College. The new Science Center, which is scheduled for completion in 1965, will be an advanced facility enabling accelerated expansion in research to continue its growth.

The entire department is branching out under the direction of its Chairman, Rev. William D. Sullivan, S.J., to meet the needs of advanced studies of modern biology, as is evidenced by the completion this spring of the first year of the doctoral program.

The Commencement in June of 1964 will see the first Ph.D. degree in Chemistry ever granted at Boston College. This advance reflects the Chemistry Department's aim of expansion to keep pace with the ever-developing science of chemistry.

Dr. Robert F. O'Malley, Chairman of the Department, pointed to recent additions to the faculty, up-to-date research laboratories, and the latest in specialized equipment as signs of the Department's advances. In recent years, new laboratories have been established for organic, inorganic, and physical chemistry. Infrared spectrophotometers, ultraviolet spectrophotometers, and gas chromatographs are some of the additions to the equipment used in the labs.

This expansion will be accelerated by the building of the new Science Center, which will allow the Department to move from restricted quarters in Devlin Hall into spacious new laboratories and offices. In this new environment research activities will be enlarged, demanding also new faculty members and more graduate fellows.

The problems of the Classics Department are inextricably bound up with the problem of fulfilling the individual needs of three types of students: first, a small group of majors (40-50) preparing for graduate school; second, a considerable number of students who want a major in classics as a background for a legal, professional, or business career; and third, those students who are planning ahead toward the priesthood.

The majors looking forward to graduate study must have a broad survey of both Latin and Greek poetry and prose; those who are planning a professional career need courses that provide a cultural and linguistic approach to the classics—both language and content; and the future priests are primarily concerned with the acquisition of Latin as a research tool.

The Classics Department, under its Chairman, Rev. Robert F. Healey, S.J., has begun this year to investigate possible curriculum changes that will provide sufficient courses for all of these undergraduate groups. If the results of the Self-Study provide more time for courses in the major field—as they almost certainly will—these will be instituted. As a prelude to this eventuality, the Department this year hired Dr. Eugene W. Bushala, an authority on the aesthetics of the Classics, to provide a New Critical optic on the Classics material.

GEOLOGY

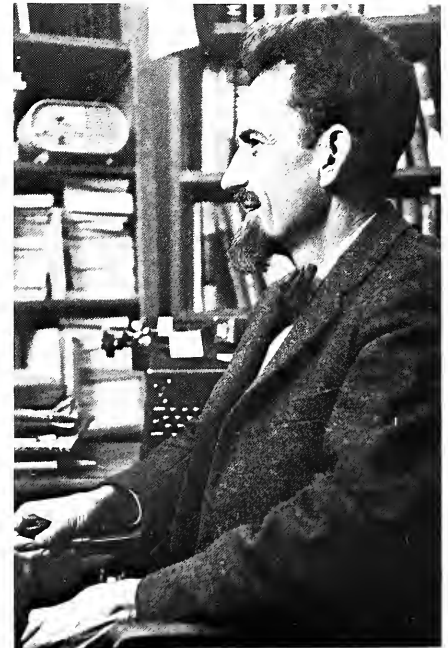

Since the Geology Department is just completing its third year in the departmental ranks, all its activities might be thought of as "new." The courses now being offered represent the most recent advances in the field, with emphasis being placed on the quantitative techniques of earth science rather than on the purely descriptive ones.

The Chairman, Rev. James W. Skehan, S.J., is presently instituting a Master of Science program for secondary school teachers in cooperation with the American Geological Institute. In addition to this, grants from the National Science Foundation are enabling undergraduates to engage in extensive original research in preparation for graduate work in many of the finest departments of geology at universities across the nation.

If any department at Boston College has exhibited the "pioneer-spirit", it is the Economics Department. It pioneered and developed the first departmental Honors Program on campus; it also pioneered and established the Economics Lecture Series, which, in the past two years, has brought to the campus such outstanding economists from other universities as Professors Solow, Musgrave, Triffin, Lerner, and Metzler. And, in 1960-61, it introduced an economics intern program, receiving six National Defense Fellowships, which were increased to eight in number in 1963-64.

In recent years, there has been a tremendous influx of students majoring in economics, presenting an ever-increasing challenge to the department.

In the past three years, approximately twenty percent of the graduating class of A&S have been economic majors; also, over ninety percent of the graduate faculty is new within the last five years.

Rev. Robert J. McEwen, S.J., Chairman of the Department and Moderator of the highly successful and vastly important Public Affairs Forum, says: "We have set our goal to establish the best economics department in a Catholic university." To achieve this objective, the Department "has placed important emphasis in our program on theory, mathematics, and independent research."

MODERN LANGUAGES

Progress is not something restricted to the sciences; it is basic to every living language of the modern world. This idea has vitalized the Modern Language Department's determination to end complacency and rise up to meet the needs of the bilingual, and in some cases trilingual contemporary man. And the judicious hiring of competent language and literature teachers is its most promising prospective along with a number of administrative reforms.

There are basically two functions of a Modern Language Department: to prepare majors for future studies and to prepare prospective graduate students in other fields to pass their language requirements. Undergraduate language majors are fortunate in that they are allowed to follow graduate language courses, but there is a definite deficiency where the other students are concerned. It is hoped that enough competent teachers will eventually take an interest in the needs of those "required" courses. The Department is definitely on the move, however, and under the leadership of Dr. Robert J. Cahill a number of innovations were inaugurated this year, such as the new language placement tests and an education-oriented workshop course in the teaching of modern languages on the high school level.

PHYSICS

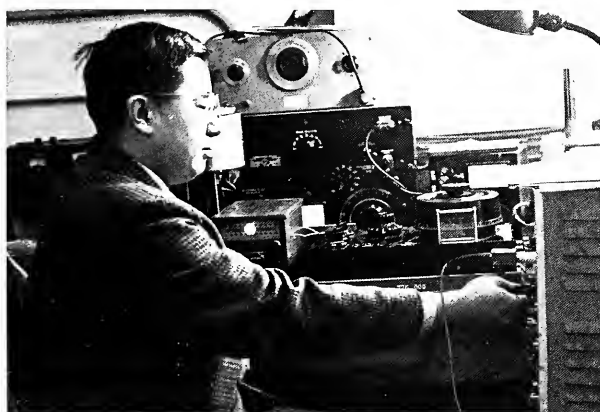

The classical coupled with the modern highlights the course offerings in the Department of Physics. Courses in classical mechanics combine with the latest in nuclear theory to offer the physics major a balanced approach to the science.

A National Science Foundation grant provided the Department with a nuclear accelerator which has been in operation for three years. A number of talented new faculty members have been added in recent years; and the Ph.D. program, instituted three years ago, has shown encouraging results.

Dr. Frederick E. White, Acting Chairman of the Department, announced that a program in Solid State Physics will be added next year and that far-reaching changes have been recommended in the Self-Study evaluation. It is hoped that all of these advances will serve to provide for the student the basic theoretical knowledge and experimental techniques required in the present-day science of physics.

The newest thing around the Department of Political Science these days is its name—which was changed from that of the Department of Government only this semester. With its new name secure, the Department is expanding the size of its faculty and, subsequently, the number of its course offerings, especially in the field of Latin-American Studies. This will permit the implementation of a senior seminar for honors program students and other top-flight students by invitation; the students enrolled in the seminar will write a senior thesis and be given oral comprehensive exams.

Dr. Paul T. Heffron, Chairman, sets three goals for himself and his professor-colleagues: first, to give the liberal arts student a view of man as a political and social animal; second, to provide for them an explanation of the nature of political science and its relation to the social sciences; and third, to provide an analysis of political institutions — “Western and non-Western, democratic and non-democratic.”

The product Dr. Heffron has in mind is “the citizen who will participate more fully and intelligently in the political life of the nation, state, and locality.” To achieve this end, he places “great emphasis on the need for political science students to enter public service in some form or other.”

PSYCHOLOGY

The Department of Psychology is a new and, relatively speaking, small department, designed to fulfill the particular needs of three distinct types of students: first, those looking for a sound cultural background in the workings of the human personality; second, those contemplating graduate study in psychology; and third, those seeking an understanding of human behavior as a background for the other disciplines.

"Because of its youth," the Department, according to Rev. James F. Moynihan, S.J., Chairman, is in a "state of constant self-appraisal." In the future, he would like to see earlier exposure of psychology courses to majors, requiring the introductory course in freshman year. Currently, there are two sections of the Introductory Psychology course, one geared to majors, the second to interested students in the other disciplines. In the offing is a required course in the behavioral sciences for all A&S students.

"Steps to enrich and upgrade the undergraduate courses" were facilitated by the opening of the Graduate Department in 1962. Fr. Moynihan recognizes the need, though, for "additional staff members to make possible senior seminars and honors offerings."

John D. Donovan, Ph.D.
Chairman of the Department

Robert G. Williams, A.M.

SOCIOLOGY

Although the Department of Sociology is one of the smallest departments in Arts and Sciences, two full-time faculty members have been added during the past year, with the possibility of two additional professors next September and the long-range view that there "may even be a cultural anthropologist on the staff someday."

Dr. John D. Donovan, Chairman of the Department, has made several recommendations as part of the Self-Study Program which A&S has undergone this past year. He has suggested a "thorough-going revision of the curriculum for sociology majors." This "revision" would make possible two separate course-plans for the sociology major—the first geared toward graduate study in sociology, the second toward enrollment in a graduate school of social work—and would encourage a strong minor in psychology and/or mathematics. Dr. Donovan looks forward to "inter-departmental programs involving psychology, sociology, economics, and political science."

The proposed Institute of Human Relations Building, which will house the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library, "will provide research facilities where sociology and psychology majors will get experience with research projects. This, in turn, will improve the type and quality of the undergraduate courses."

In response to the ever-increasing demands of the business world, several changes have recently been made in the accounting curriculum of the College of Business Administration under the Chairmanship of Professor Arthur L. Glynn. The elementary course in accounting formerly offered to all CBA sophomores has been placed in the freshman curriculum; and a three semester-hour course titled "Control" was developed as a requirement for all sophomore students. The objective of this unique course—for which Dr. Richard M. Lynch of the Department is under contract to write a textbook—is to provide an intelligent understanding of managerial control through the use of cost data. It is expected that this new format, together with the textbook will be adopted by other universities offering business courses.

A new elective course, Controllership, with the purpose of developing the administrative functions, quantitative techniques, and judgments in the area of fiscal management through practice in the evaluation of alternatives, is being offered to senior CBA students by the Department, in its continuing effort to train the students who select accounting as their field of concentration to be leaders in the business world.

BUSINESS LAW

The approach to the study of Business Law in the College of Business Administration has changed considerably during the past few years. The student is now orientated to the subject by first examining important current constitutional issues. The first cases read, for example, are Engle v. Vitale (1962)—the so-called “right to pray case”—and School District v. Schempp (1963)—concerning the reading of the Bible in public schools. These are followed by the school integration cases, the freedom of assembly cases (NAACP v. Alabama and Communist Party v. Subversive Activities Control-Board), and, finally, freedom of speech and due process as illustrated in Attorney General v. “Tropic of Cancer”.

The next major phase of the course—unlike prior years—involves a consideration of the general aspects of the law of unfair competition and restraint of trade, including the right of privacy, trade labels, and interference with business relations. With this type of legal environment as a framework, the traditional topics such as contracts, negotiable instruments, and business organizations are then covered.

The four full-time members of the Department, Philip F. Garity, Vincent A. Harrington, William B. Hickey, and Chairman James E. Shaw have, collectively, in excess of 60 years of teaching law at Boston College.

FINANCE

If you see a student walking around campus with his daily copy of the Wall Street Journal tucked under his arm, chances are that he is a finance major being trained in the importance of a paper which will remain largely unfathomable to the majority of the rest of us.

Under the Chairmanship of Rev. John J. L. Collins, S.J., the objective of the Finance Department is to acquaint the students with the difficulties associated with the internal financial organization of a business corporation. This is done through courses in cost control, real estate, banking administration, and insurance, together with those which give keen insights into the technicalities of stocks and bonds.

MARKETING

The interrelationship of various areas of study, each illuminating the other, is a fact well-known to the student majoring in marketing; for he sees the relation between his field of concentration and such disciplines as the behavioral sciences, mathematics, and statistics. This situation is reflected in recent developments within the Marketing Department.

Dr. Gerald F. Price, Chairman, commented: "Marketing, as a highly dynamic field, is always changing. And to cope with this problem the department has been cutting back and redesigning courses for quite some time." For example, such areas as defense marketing, which is presently of great importance, are being studied by the students, despite the lack of literature on the subject.

PRODUCTION

According to the Chairman of the Production Department, Professor Justin C. Cronin, "The whole area of production is employing the computer, and this requires a more mathematical approach. The quantitative aspects of production are being emphasized; the traditional conventional approach has changed to one which emphasizes the employment of statistical mathematics, linear programming, and operational research."

Among courses offered by the Department are Industrial Techniques, designed to afford an appreciation of the industrial engineering problems faced by management, the industrial engineer, and the worker; and Electronic Data Processing, stressing the description of the stored program digital computer and the special data processing languages.

SCHOOL OF NURSING

Founded in 1947, the School of Nursing moved from Newbury Street to the Chestnut Hill Campus and its own building—the gift of His Eminence Richard Cardinal Cushing—in April of 1960, making this year's seniors the first class to have spent all four years on the Heights. The basic purpose of the educational program in nursing is to provide opportunities for each student to acquire the knowledge, understanding, attitudes, and skills necessary to give comprehensive nursing care to people in various hospital and community settings.

Its credo: "The School of Nursing is a ministerial profession serving God through dedicated service to man; that there are personal satisfactions in nursing derived from the giving of this service; that this service is of a personal nature and implies caring for or helping people; and that for the perfection of this service, the nurse must have an understanding and respect for the nature, dignity, and worthwhileness of man."

Vincent C. Nuccio, D.Ed.
Chairman of the Department and Associate Dean

New this year in the Department of Education is Dr. Vincent C. Nuccio, Associate Dean of the School and Chairman of the Department, who joined the Administration from Cornell University. His main emphasis has been placed on the Graduate Program in Education, which is the largest department in our Graduate School with over 90 doctoral and 130 masters candidates.

The Masters of Arts in Teaching Program is being reorganized and revitalized to attract graduates of liberal arts colleges to the teaching profession. An experimental program will be initiated this summer and next year with the cooperation of the Wellesley School System. It will involve a six-week summer program of graduate courses followed by a year-long teaching internship in the Wellesley public schools, during which the student-teachers will conduct three class periods a day and enroll in two graduate courses on campus.

Looking to the future, Dr. Nuccio hopes to establish an M.A.T. or M.S.T. Program in cooperation with the other graduate departments to be open to experienced teachers. This is designed to meet the growing need for better-qualified teachers on the secondary school level.

Another recent development involving both undergraduate and graduate students is the Educational Youth Activities Bureau Tutorial Program which brings high school students from deprived areas to the campus environment for tutorial assistance. It is hoped that this program might be expanded to include help in remedial reading, speech, and guidance, together with a testing program.

SPEECH

The Speech Department at Boston College was established in the Fall of 1961 by Rev. Joseph M. Larkin, S.J., Director of Drama, Dr. Mary T. Kinnane, Dean of Women, and Dr. John H. Lawton, Director of Debate—who is currently serving as Chairman of the Department.

The purpose is to provide public-speaking courses for students in the entire university; this was first undertaken in A&S and CBA, followed by Nursing, and, in the present year, was expanded so that all schools are now represented. There has been an increasingly high demand for these courses which are already so large that only one-fifth of those desiring them could be enrolled. So the Department is expanding accordingly, with the addition to its faculty in 1962 of Walter L. Cullinan, professor of Speech Science and Speech Therapy, and this year of J. Paul Marcoux, whose special field is the Oral Interpretation of Literature.

A major in speech was established in 1963 in the School of Education (Elementary Division); and, in 1964, a program—for which there are already plenty of candidates—will be launched for teachers in secondary schools, providing certification in both English and speech.

UNIVERSITY SODALITIES

The Boston College Sodality is an organization of undergraduate men and women who seek to develop a vital Christian commitment in accordance with their vocation as laymen. Since the educated Christian layman must know where he stands, the Boston College Sodality is dedicated to an intensive, searching growth in the spiritual, intellectual and social aspects of contemporary Christian life.

The Boston College Sodality stands for an honest coming to terms with the university process, in all its aspects, in the intellectual and religious community of others who are having the same kind of experience. By this open confrontation with problems of every kind, the Boston College Sodality hopes to contribute to the formation of Christian laymen with sympathetic insight who are prepared for active Christian witness.

The Sodality's ninety members are trained in a four century old tradition of prayer and action. The plan of action and of study undertaken by the Sodality is, however, based firmly upon the interests of the modern Church. Consequently, the Sodality has small groups working in four major areas: the local community, the international area, liturgy, and ecumenics.

The sodalists, carrying into concrete action the Church's concern for the social order, have engaged in many projects in the Boston area. These have included tutoring and recreational programs in culturally deprived areas; the teaching of Christian doctrine; voter registration of minority groups; and deep involvement in the struggle for civil rights, from both a theoretical and a practical point of view.

Sodalists working for a Christian response to international problems are motivated by Pope John's assertion that "The solidarity which binds all men and makes them members of the same family requires that nations enjoying an abundance of material goods should not remain indifferent to those nations whose citizens suffer from internal problems that result in poverty, hunger and an inability to enjoy even the most elementary human rights."

In addition to conducting a program of study intended to remedy what is often the American Catholic's most serious blind-spot—his international obligations—the sodality is also the Peace Corps representative on the Boston College campus. In this capacity, it coordinates and directs the efforts of other student groups to encourage Peace Corps service among Boston College students.

Since Pope John XXIII made Catholics aware of the scandalous nature of Christian disunion and laid great stress upon the need for all Christians to seek unity, the sodality's ecumenics group has engaged in serious study and discussion centered around this problem. In addition to frequent meetings with Protestant student groups to discuss the forces dividing and uniting Christians, the sympathetic contact thus established has enabled the Sodality to work closely with Protestant groups in matters of common Christian concern, such as civil rights.

The fourth major area in which sodalists have labored is that of the liturgy. Through their efforts, dialogue Masses facing the people with hymns and an offertory procession have been accepted in the resident student chapel. The sodalists hope that by these innovations and by a careful program of education in the liturgy, a meaningful liturgy on the Boston College campus will, in the words of Vatican Council II, "impart an ever increasing vigor to the Christian life of the faithful."

In addition to group activity, the sodality places a stress upon personal, intellectual and spiritual development among its members. A program of reading and discussion is used to familiarize the sodalist with the currents of thought in the modern Church, while his prayer-life is intended to root him firmly in the mainstream of the biblical, liturgical spirituality of the contemporary Church.

The ultimate intention of the sodality is to form a thoughtful Christian, aware of the challenges and opportunities of the age; a Christian who will be a leaven wherever he may be; a Christian who will bring Christ to those who need Him.

EVENING COLLEGE SODALITY

The Evening College Sodality, which conducted its training program one weekend last October at St. Joseph's College in West Hartford, Connecticut, expends the major part of its time and effort in raising funds for various religious and charitable projects.

The Sodality conducts two collections among the Evening College students during the academic year: one in the fall for the benefit of the Jesuit Missions; the other in the spring to help support the Lay Apostolate Program. They also solicited donations during the first semester for their Christmas project—the distribution of food baskets and gifts to needy families in the Boston area.

ST. JOHN BERCHMAN SOCIETY

The St. John Berchman Society is the official congregation of male resident students who share a common desire to assist at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and other liturgical and devotional functions held in the Boston College Dormitory area.

During this past year there has been a renewed interest on the part of the students to serve in this capacity at both the main altar in St. Joseph's Chapel and the numerous other altars in the upper campus area where priests offer private Masses. This desire has been mirrored in the increased numbers and spirit of the Society and their active role in the liturgical rejuvenation occurring on campus.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

One who views with a genuine concern the institution of Student Government at Boston College finds himself greatly disturbed by the dilemma which exists there. On the one hand, he cannot help but become aware of the active dedication of so many involved within its vast and complex structure. And yet, as he regards its concrete resolutions and proposals, he cannot do otherwise than detect a kind of irrelevancy within many of them to the whole rationale of university life.

Student Government, simply because it exists within the context of the University, must have as its same general goals those of that community of scholars and pupils. Boston College as a Catholic university acknowledges another distinctive mark—that of Christian principles—in its formula for excellence. Student Government must constantly regard its every action in the light of these precepts. It must be characterized by a keen sensitivity, able discernment, clear perceptivity, and constant self-reflection in its response to the intellectual, cultural, social, and religious needs of the University. All this must be undertaken in a spirit of freedom, openness, and commitment.

With this in mind, a few enumerations become necessary. In the area of intellectual life, Student Government should recognize its prerogative to investigate and make recommendations with regard to such matters as course appraisals, a tri-semester program, study facilities, speakers on the campus, and independent study. In the area of culture, it must encourage and, if need be, sponsor art-exhibits, on-campus concerts, drama festivals, and movies of artistic value—as was done, for example, by the Campus Council last March when it presented the Yale Russian Chorus. On the societal level, focus must be placed upon the social implications our education demands; the Peace Corps, Lay Apostolate, and various tutorial, guidance, and recreational programs, as well as work in race relations and peace and disarmament, are opportunities for very real contributions to society and, as such, must be brought to the attention of all students.

This is a huge task, but this is the responsibility those in Student Government have taken upon themselves. It will demand changes in the policies—if not in the very structure—of Student Government. Because the Campus Council is so directly responsible to the needs of the University as a whole, it must work closely with the Senates of the various Colleges. Greater cooperation with the faculty and administration in the affairs of Student Government might also be encouraged. Because this task is so great, Student Government must delegate some of its responsibilities by utilizing to a much greater extent the ideas, interests, and talents of those students who are exceptionally well-qualified in specific areas of student concern.

CAMPUS COUNCIL

The situation is not so unpropitious as it may thus far seem to be portrayed; some very significant progress has been made in certain areas. In the spring of 1963 the Student Senate of the College of Arts and Sciences initiated the first Community Conference in the history of Boston College. Student leaders and various members of the faculty were invited to join together and discuss what they felt to be some of the major problems on campus and make various suggestions as to how they might be alleviated. While the results of such an endeavor have not had the impact one might have hoped, this could mark the beginning of a new era in Student Government. With the Campus Council having taken the next step by including all the Colleges of the University at this Conference, it should begin to have an even greater influence in the policy-making decisions of both administration and Student Government. The long-overlooked contribution which the faculty made to the Conference has brought forth much thoughtful, frank, and honest discussion. Student Government in its consideration of membership in the United States National Student Association (NSA) has encouraged students to express their views at several announced seminars. An increasing awareness of the presence on the campus of students from the world over has been evident and has engendered a very sincere interest in them on the part of students and faculty. Student Government is also beginning to turn its attention to the Peace Corps and Lay Apostolate Programs.

SENATE

The Campus Council has established a Social Committee which, in effect, can leave the Council free to deal with topics far more pertinent to Student Government. To facilitate communication within each of the four classes, the Inter-Class Councils attend to those matters which pertain to the respective classes as a whole. Their concern is particularized to social areas and has generally met with most notable success. Kenton, Covington, Ellington, and, lest we too soon forget, Jim Lucie's band have admirably relieved that all-time great mania of "Friday night and nothing-to-do" under the sponsorship of the Inter-Class Councils.

This is the direction which Student Government must continue to take; these are the areas to which it must turn its attention. The direction it will finally chart for itself will ultimately depend upon the students themselves. A cynical attitude towards Student Government is just as detrimental as one which is purely apathetic.

UNDERGRADUATE NURSING SENATE

GRADUATE NURSING SENATE

EVENING COLLEGE SENATE

The life of the "Sleepy Scholars" in the Evening College is brightened considerably by the work of their Student Council, which sponsors a season of social events—from the five dances in Alumni Hall and the annual Semi-formal at the Hampshire House in November to the annual Christmas Party in Campion and the ski weekend in New Hampshire.

The role of the Evening College Council, however, is not limited solely to social life, but extends to one of service to the University, its students, and society. This is evidenced by their help to the office during registration week, their Career Night program, and their Halloween party for underprivileged children.

COUNCIL OF RESIDENT MEN

The Council of Resident Men started the dormitory year 1963-64 with a new name, a new constitution, and a renewed emphasis on its keynote: service to the male resident students of Boston College.

Under the presidency of Richard DiMase, the former Dorm Council has involved itself in all aspects of dormitory living; in every area the Council's goal is to make dormitory living an integral part of the overall life of the University. Composed of representatives from each dormitory corridor, the Council sponsors and supports social, cultural, and religious activities and seeks to make the four years at Boston College a rich and valuable experience for resident men.

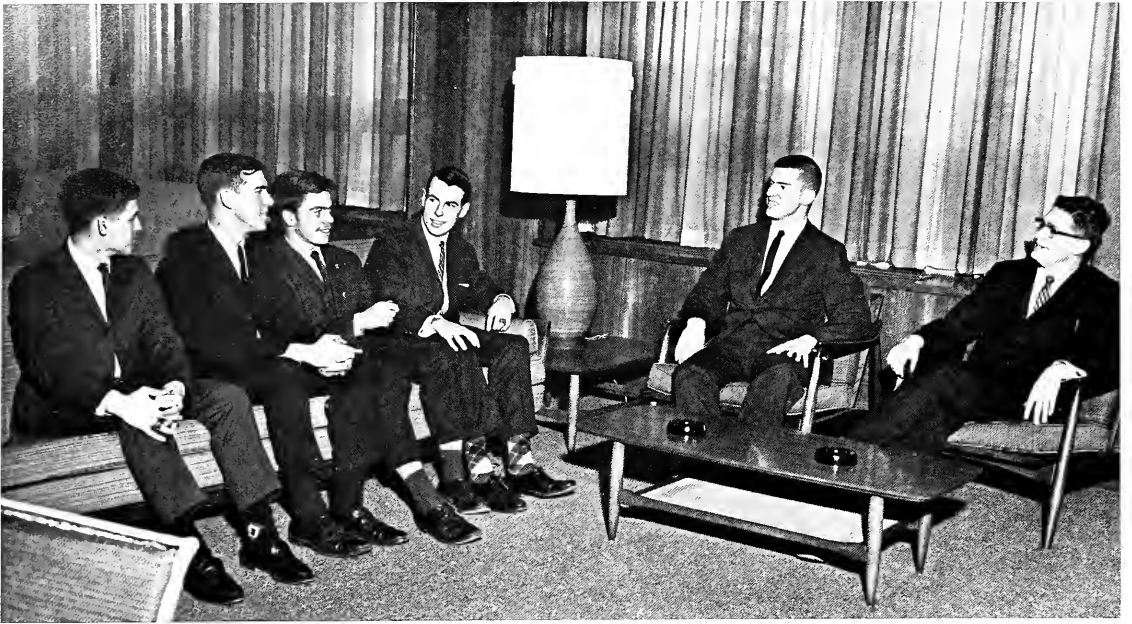

Furthermore, the Council serves as a vital link between the administration and the individual dorm student. Corridor representatives and the Council "newsletter" combine to keep students informed of the Council's work. On the other hand, special committees endeavor to present the dormitory view—critical or constructive—to the proper administrative officials.

ASSOCIATION OF WOMEN RESIDENTS

The formation of the Association of Women Resident Students in the fall of 1963 marked the first time that the 400 female residents from both the Schools of Education and Nursing had banded together. During the spring, the Association wrestled with matters of organization, and the conflicting regulations for the Nursing and Education students. United by the fact that they all live in Boston College "girls' dorms," the members of the Association aim to provide a broader base for social activities and lay the foundation for a representative governing body once the women's dormitories are constructed on the Heights.

Discussing plans for grad school are Ronald Forlenza, John Walsh, Martin Kilmer, Ralph Fox, Edward Shawl, and John Dimond.

HONOR SOCIETIES

ALPHA SIGMA NU

ORDER OF THE CROSS AND CROWN

BETA GAMMA SIGMA

ALPHA AND OMEGA

To give recognition to members of the graduating class who have achieved a high scholastic standing while lending their leadership abilities to one or more campus organizations, there are a number of Honor Societies at Boston College which elect members each year.

The only such society which is University-wide is Alpha Sigma Nu, the National Jesuit Honor Society founded in 1915 to honor students who have distinguished themselves in scholarship, service, and loyalty to the University. Reserved to Seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences is the Order of the Cross and Crown, whose membership is drawn from those who have consistently ranked on the Dean's List and have participated in extra-curricular activities.

In the College of Business Administration, the national fraternity Beta Gamma Sigma gives special recognition to the highest ten percent of the graduating class in commerce and business. The honor society in the School of Education is Alpha and Omega, founded in 1955, which elects members in junior year after review of the student's record by undergraduate and faculty representatives.

There are two such honor societies in the School of Nursing—the Siena Society for senior students in Basic Nursing and the Mater Spei Society for seniors in the Graduate Nursing Program. Admission to both is by application, examination of the student's record, and an interview.

MATER SPEI

GOLD KEY SOCIETY

The Gold Key Society is the ambassadorial student organization of the University; from its inception over 25 years ago as a greeting and pep squad for visiting athletic teams until the present, the Key has grown in size and scope with the University. Today the Key serves in many diversified activities, from Citizens' Seminars and Orientation Week to the football rallies and hockey games, fulfilling the role of a public relations man—acting as guide and greeter to those visiting the campus.

"Through serving her, you shall know her, and in knowing her, you shall love her." This, perhaps, is the deepest insight into the motivation of a Keyman. These men have grown to know and love their Alma Mater through "Service and Sacrifice" and have shared their enthusiasm with those who visit our campus.

To the notions of "Service and Sacrifice" the Key adds the notions of Spirituality and Sociability. Through the annual Parents' Communion Breakfast and the closed retreat, the Keymen take time to reflect on the reasons of life and their personal goals in the framework of a Catholic collegiate atmosphere. The Gold Key is a fraternal society without being a fraternity; it is a brotherhood of like-minded men serving a common goal—and making lasting friendships in the process.

It is sometimes difficult to say just what the Key is because of the multiplicity of its activities. Yet, its credo is service to the University, no matter what the function, and the Key fulfills what is asked of it with pleasure, whether the task be glamorous or menial. Although the Key is best known for its athletic events, the Keymen believe in total service to the University, no matter what the arena of activity might be.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI

Since its foundation in 1955 through the efforts of Rev. W. Seavey Joyce, S.J., Dean of CBA, the Delta Eta Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi—the oldest and largest fraternity in commerce—has contributed the leadership to many of the social and professional activities on campus. In addition, Alpha Kappa Psi has long recognized and helped satisfy the need for closer student-faculty intellectual and social relationships as a means of maintaining and strengthening university morale.

Among the achievements of Alpha Kappa Psi this year were: a series of career counseling panels for seniors; a four part marriage lecture series open to the male students; a comprehensive report evaluating electives available to CBA students; and a "Graduate School Profile" listing the admission requirements for the eighty top graduate schools of business throughout the country.

But Alpha Kappa Psi has been of special service to its members. In addition to the bi-weekly meetings featuring distinguished speakers from the business world, the fraternity sponsored a number of social events highlighted by the Initiation Dinner Dance. The year was fittingly climaxed with a closed retreat for the brothers at Easter Point, Gloucester.

DELTA SIGMA PI

The Delta Kappa Chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, a professional fraternity organized primarily to benefit the study of business at the undergraduate level, is active in many different areas of B. C. life. Delta Sigma Pi's interests include encouraging scholarships, facilitating a student association for mutual advancement by means of research and practice, promoting a closer affiliation between the business world and the university student, and advocating a higher standard of commercial ethics.

Delta Sigma Pi provides an opportunity for undergraduates to associate with leaders of industry and business education; this association hopefully gives university men a knowledge of the business vocation that goes beyond material available in a classroom or textbook.

Some of the many programs that Delta Sigma Pi has sponsored are: the presentation of the "Delta Sigma Pi Award" to the outstanding junior in CBA; a series of invited speakers to lecture on the problems of the business world; tours of local businesses; and an annual Christmas Party for the children at a local orphanage.

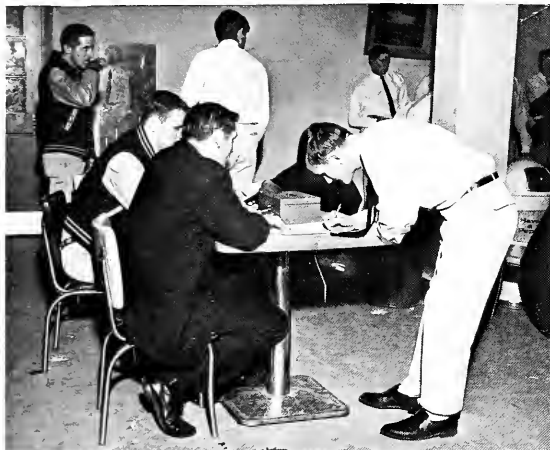

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

The Boston College Council of the Knights of Columbus was officially born only two years ago when it received its charter from the Supreme Council in Connecticut. In the short time since its inception, the Boston College Council has received many awards in recognition of its status as the largest and certainly the most active of all university councils.

The aim of the Boston College K. of C. is to foster a truly Catholic spirit among its members and to spread this spirit to all those who share Christian principles. The many religious, educational, and social activities sponsored by the Knights contribute both to the spread of Catholicism and the formation of a unity among the membership.

Although the Council is young, the presence of its six hundred members is felt throughout the University. On many occasions, the Knights have taken the lead in University-sponsored functions. For example, the responsibility for the annual blood drive operation has been given over to the Council because of its strong support of this program in the past.

Furthermore, even though membership in the Knights is geared to students on campus, after graduation many Knights transfer and become outstanding members in their respective local councils.

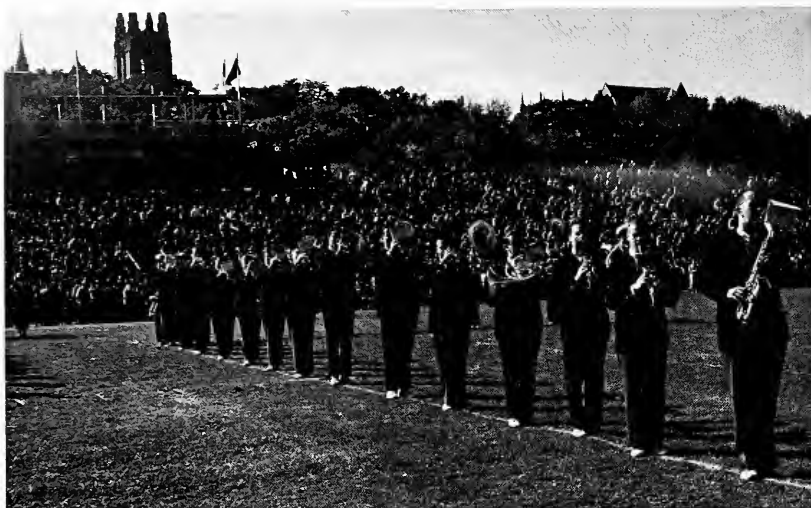

WVBC

One of the youngest, but nevertheless one of the most dynamic organizations on campus can be found on the top floor of Fulton Hall. From its studios in Room 411, WVBC—"The Voice of Boston College"—broadcasts a program of music, sports, and special events for the benefit of the upper campus area.

Since its inception in 1959, the station has operated with a two-fold purpose: to provide programs of special interest for the dormitory students; and to provide its members with experience in all phases of radio broadcasting. To accomplish its first aim, WVBC broadcasts a varied program of popular, folk, jazz, and classical music, giving special attention to the widely differing tastes of its audience. Its second aim is achieved through the opportunities presented to the members to learn, by actual practice, radio broadcasting in all its aspects: writing, programming, production, direction, announcing, engineering, advertising, and many other phases. All these duties in the operation of the station are performed entirely by students; the dedication and enthusiasm of these student announcers and engineers has been the station's strongest asset in its five years of operation.

The main function of the band at Boston College is to provide music at sporting events, and this it does with verve and vigor. Under the capable direction of Mr. Peter Siragusa, who has been with the band since 1958, the Boston College Eagles' Band has marched and captured top honors in the annual St. Patrick's Day Parade in New York City as well as in local competitions. Their marching is truly a model of precision.

Since last year, however, the band has expanded its concept to include repertoire to be played in concert. Thus the Centennial Band Concert of last year, played on the front steps of Bapst Library, marked the revival of the instrumental tradition at Boston College. The Concert Band is new and struggling, but not without merit. Its initial concert was creditable and it does some things very well, especially Broadway and dance tunes with infectious rhythms, such as Glenn Osser's "Tango for Band." However, it is difficult, in a college where the Fine Arts play so small a role and are hardly encouraged, to expect to find top flight musicians and artists—people who have had competent and sensitive training in their fields: the college just does not attract such people. Thus, as Jiminey Cricket so aptly put it, "It's what you do with what you got that pays off in the end," and Mr. Siragusa with the band, Mr. Peloquin with the chorale, and Fr. Larkin with the Dramatic Society are doing just that and are doing some good things, but not without many problems and struggles.

For instance, the lack of a decent auditorium for concerts and plays is appalling. Another factor is the general apathy of both faculty and students when the various groups do perform—to empty halls! And again, the lack of trained students makes the work of the various directors that much more difficult. One is tempted to rework O'Casey's Captain Boyle to say, "the worl' o' Foin' Ahrts at Boston College is in a terrible state o' chassis!" What the future promises is another matter, but that will be when we get a Fine Arts Center built and working efficiently. The presence this year of an artist and writer on campus is one hopeful indication that "something is coming," preferably a Fine Arts Center. When that time comes, the gifted students will come and the audiences will come.

EAGLES' BAND

UNIVERSITY CHORALE

There was a time, in Elizabethan England, when educated men could sing eight-part madrigals at sight and play at least one musical instrument well. Today, most people have but nostalgic memories of two wasted years of piano lessons, abandoned because practicing interfered with baseball or Girl Scouts or because their teachers wore pince-nez. Today, group singing has been relegated to the discipline known as the "glee club" and throughout American colleges and universities, sons and daughters of Apollo devote much extra-curricular time and energy to the making of music, with varying degrees of success.

Perhaps the most outstanding characteristic of the University Chorale of Boston College (the name was changed from "glee club" to "chorale" in 1961 when a women's chorus was added) is one which every artistic endeavor must have if it is to succeed: the ability to communicate life. And this is possible only through the competence, inspiration, and dynamism of its director, Mr. C. Alexander Peloquin. It was in 1956 that Mr. Peloquin arrived at Boston College to find its Glee Club suffering from a malady called "mediocrity" caused by a lack of artistic standards both in choice of repertoire and performance. It is therefore very much to Mr. Peloquin's credit that the Glee Club was able to move from "There is Nothing Like a Dame" to Schubert Masses and contemporary choral works, notably his own Missa Domini. And Boston College's part in the Berlioz Requiem, sung in memory of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, was indeed its finest hour.

Perhaps Mr. Peloquin's greatest contribution at Boston College, however, is his ability to get students excited about good music so that they are willing to study it seriously and perform it dynamically and are able to appreciate its power to uplift and exhilarate. For, after all, if this four year stay called "college" is to be of any value, it will be because we who have passed through will have at least begun to learn how to appreciate the so-called "finer things in life." And who knows? Maybe in time, with our four day week and our leisure, we will turn from our pre-fab entertainments and take up the viol da gamba or do as Milton, who would "be cheerful in his gout fits, and sing."

DRAMATIC SOCIETY

The third and last of the campus groups devoted to the performing arts is the Dramatic Society, which for years has been an active organization at Boston College. Under the superb direction for the past ten years of Rev. Joseph Larkin, S.J., a product of the Catholic University of America Drama School, the Dramatic Society has aimed at furthering aesthetic interest and subsequent artistic values in the University. The need for this appreciation of Fine Arts—choreutic, spatial, literary, and musical—is recognized by every competent educational authority.

And yet, there are the old problems again. Out of a total enrollment at Boston College of around eight thousand students and teachers, hardly anybody attends the dramatic productions, and the students of the drama are forced to meet and rehearse in a building that even the termites have abandoned. And can't we even afford to buy a curtain for poor little Champion Auditorium, that sterling example of the well-lit, roomy, and versatile stage?

Despite primitive conditions, the Dramatic Society has done some fine things in the past. Their production of King Lear, perhaps Shakespeare's most difficult play, had some good moments, and the Centennial Play, Cenodoxus—although a very different dramatic genre—was admirably performed. The Dramatic Society has also staged some highly successful One Act Play Festivals and Workshops. The highlight of the 1963-1964 season: T. S. Eliot's Murder in the Cathedral, a beautiful play.

By way of conclusion to this section on the performing arts, there are some excellent things being done on the campus which will become so much more professional with the advent of a Fine Arts Center, more talented students, and more interested audiences. The potential is here and the time is ripe.

FULTON DEBATING SOCIETY

Founded in 1867, the Fulton Debating Society has ever since been instrumental in developing articulate Catholic leaders and in bringing honor to Boston College. This year, traditional elements combined with a number of significant "firsts" to produce another successful year for the Fulton.

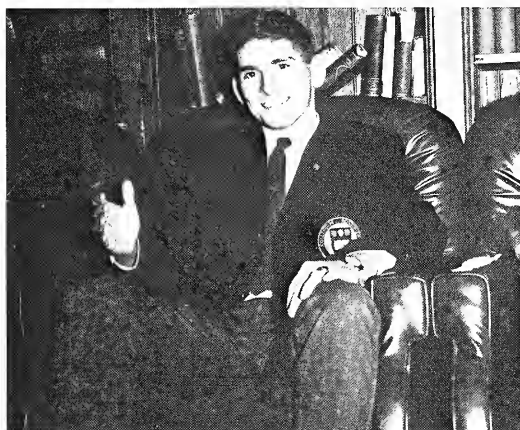

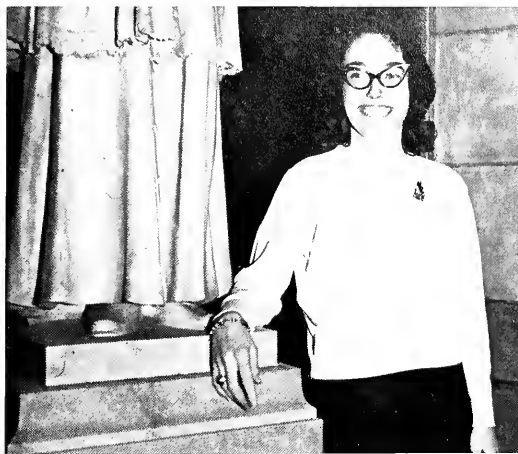

At no tournament this year has the varsity team failed to reach at least the semifinal round. The latter statement points out the consistency which has characterized the performance of the debaters. With the memory of last year's third place finish in the National Championships at West Point as a starting point, the Fulton's top two-man team of senior Jim Unger and junior Joe McLaughlin were ranked either first, second, or third at the Kentucky, Brandeis, Miami, Redlands, Harvard, Northwestern, and Dartmouth tournaments. No other team in the country could match this record of sustained excellence.

The aura of success was not confined to the number one team alone. Senior Rick Ward, junior John Raedel, sophomore Al Wagner, and a large number of freshmen produced impressive results from the M.I.T. to the Emporia, Kansas, tournaments.

With such successes as a spur, the Fultonians were able to expand their geographical horizons as well. In a trip over the Christmas holidays, Unger and McLaughlin travelled from Boston to Miami to Redlands, California, and back again to Boston. Not only was this the first time that debaters from Boston College had competed in a West Coast tournament, but it also marked the longest journey ever undertaken by members of the Society. The "Flying Fultonians" became known and feared across the country.

At every tournament in which he competed, Jim Unger, President of the Society, received an individual speaker award. Included among these were six first places at the Brandeis, St. Joseph's, Miami, Redlands, Northwestern, and Notre Dame tournaments. Such a performance sent debate historians scurrying to check the record books in hopes of finding any comparable feat in recent history. That they will seems very unlikely.

Having been the guests of so many colleges so often, the debaters also took their turn at playing the role of host. In February the Society sponsored their 2nd Annual Debate Tournament on the Heights campus. Tournament committee workers Mary Lou Liston, Ralph Fox, Ernie Zupancic, and Jack Dimond were among the many who made the tournament the success that it was. Beyond this, numerous Ful-tonians worked with high school debaters to encourage forensic activities at all levels. In conjunction with Boston College High School the Fulton Society sponsored a national high school tournament on the Heights campus immediately after Easter.

While debating, as any other intellectual activity, requires a degree of innate ability, one cannot ignore the great importance of proper coaching and training. The success of the Fulton debaters is a reflection upon the quality of their coaching staff. Head Coach and Moderator, Dr. John H. Lawton, as his many speech classes know, is a tireless seeker of perfection and has spent many long and hard hours working with individuals and teams. Kevin Byrne, a former Ful-tonian and presently at B.C. Law School, and Lee Huebner, formerly of Northwestern and presently at Harvard Graduate School, have both lent their experience and time to debaters.

The Fulton Debating Society is more than a collection of names or trophies or airline tickets. During the past few years it has come once again to symbolize on a national level the standard of intellectual achievement and excellence which Boston College rightly claims to impart to her students.

TOASTMASTERS' CIRCLE

The CBA Toastmasters' Circle, a student-run organization founded six years ago, meets weekly to help students become more adept at public speaking by developing qualities of poise and self-confidence and a presentation which is organized and coherent. After speeches by three students introduced by a student toastmaster, the other members join in evaluating the progress and achievement of their peers; the more advanced student speakers are then invited to join the Toastmasters' Speakers Bureau which, upon request, addresses outside organizations.

At their annual banquet, awards are given to outstanding Circle members: a Toastmaster's pin is given to those who have attained a proficiency in public speaking based on continual improvement and recommendation by a club officer; and a trophy is awarded to the student who best exemplifies the Toastmasters' ideals of spirit and performance.

CBA SCHOLARSHIP TRUST FUND

The CBA Scholarship Trust Fund is—to the best of the knowledge of its president, senior James Buckley—the only scholarship program in the country organized and operated entirely by students. Recognizing the need for upperclass scholarships in the Business College, seven members of the Class of 1963 inaugurated the fund in January of last year.

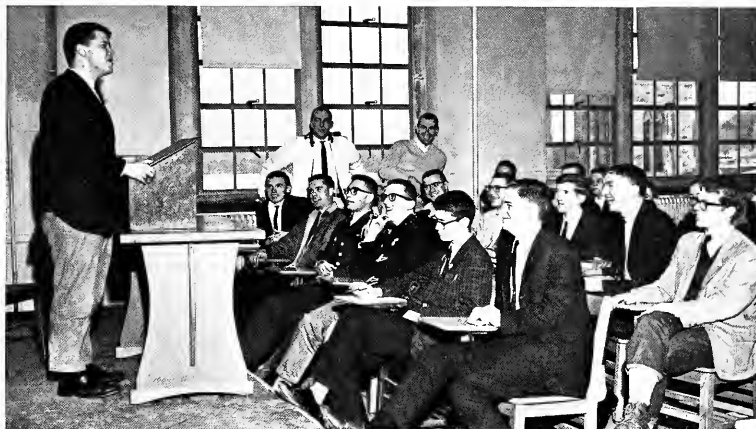

In the year since its inception, the committee has raised $1900 through student, faculty, and alumni contributions; $600 of this was awarded during this academic year in the form of two scholarships of $300 each. The balance is divided between a cash account in the Newton Savings Bank and the stock investments in the Upjohn Company (6 shares) and Babcock-Wilcox (8 shares).

This provides the members of the fund committee with a unique business experience in the areas of accounting, investment research, fund raising, publicity, and overall organizational management. A faculty selection committee has also been established, with Professor William B. Hickey acting as the Trust Fund's legal advisor.

The Heights

BOSTON COLLEGE CENTENNIAL YEAR

In February, 1963, as Venus, Mars, and Mercury swept into a rare inter-stellar juxtaposition, and Boston College climbed to the crest of its Centennial Celebration, a group of new editors assumed the task of producing a weekly edition of the Heights. The "New Heights" (as they called it) was a peculiar composition: in part, a fresh, free, original approach; the remainder, a continuation of the tradition of spontaneity and sometime-chaos.

In the very first issue, under the leadership of Editor Mike Keady, many innovations were apparent. First, in an attempt to have a later deadline, and, hence, fresher news, the editorial staff changed to a publisher with high-speed, modern presses. Second, the paper itself was new—the traditional glossy fish-wrapper had given way to standard newsprint. Finally, the size of the newspaper was increased from eight to twelve pages, expanding the space available for news coverage, features articles, and, on occasion, "filler."

In the course of the new editors' tenure, many other changes were effected as well. The paper joined the Associated Collegiate Press, received the advice, expertise, and camaraderie of a new moderator, Rev. John J. Long, S.J., and—caught in the coils of a labor strike at their publishing firm—changed printers again.

However, it would be wrong to conclude that the "New Heights" was all new. The paper still lacked any semblance of organization or coherence. The wild melée in McElroy 102 on Tuesday nights still reigned as, hopefully, it always will. The editors were still faced with the problem of laying-out stories in some kind of order at 3 A.M. when everyone else had gone home and the University slept—unaware of the frantic, bleary-eyed scuffle occurring under the lights in the Student Union. And, of course, there was the relatively new problem of not being able to leave the building after 10:30 P.M.; if you did, the Cerebus of McElroy locked the doors, leaving you outside (and with an excuse to go home).

$400 for drinks, $300 for sandwiches, $25 for printing costs. It all goes, Father.

And this is the first case of libel . . .

Looking back over some of the feature stories of the past year, one can recall the great spectrum of events and emotions the pages of the Heights have captured forever. Of immense importance to the entire university was the Centennial Colloquium; the Catholic-Protestant Theological Colloquium; Father Küng's Candlemas Lecture; the late John F. Kennedy's visit and speech; and, of course, the initiation of the Self-Study Program.

On the distaff side, the typical small griefs and disappointments that flirt through the pages of every newspaper were drowned by the swell of sorrow and incredulity following upon the sudden assassination of President Kennedy. Boston College was fortunate insofar as it had the memory of his personal warmth and vitality to help salve the anguish of his untimely death.

Of particular interest to the students was the paper's activity as coordinator and instructor. Certainly, the student participation in such questions as NSA and the Kennedy Memorial would have been impossible without the active role undertaken by the newspaper in campus discussions.

But now the "New Heights" has become the "Old Heights"—and the new editors face the task of imprinting their editions with the same stamp of individuality and "newness" which characterized the Heights of 1963-64.

The Sleepy Eagle, a mimeographed newspaper running to several pages in length, was founded in 1961 by the students of the Evening College to serve as a bulletin of information and opinion for the collegians who are on the campus only a few nights each week—to encourage among them a greater unity of purpose and friendship with their fellow “Sleepy Eagles” and with the University. “Sleepy” keeps them awake to the various activities sponsored by the University—the lectures, concerts, and sporting events—and to those which concern primarily the evening students—their musical show, Christmas Party, and annual Communion Breakfast.

Under the editorship of Brian Magrane, the paper also publishes the decisions of the Evening Student Council and introduces articles of concern to the faculty and students. A sample issue might contain items on faculty research and publication, the latest Evening College hockey results, an editorial comment on Hochhuth's The Deputy or on the Kennedy Memorial Fund.

The undergraduate publications of Boston College exist for the purpose, as one editor has put it, of printing student papers of very odd proportion and very doubtful relevance. However, from the point of view of allowing the students to assume positions of responsibility the journals are an invaluable part of the college experience. These four journals, the Stylus, the Journal of Business, the Cosmos, and the Humanities Magazine, manage to cover a great deal of territory and produce some work of very high quality as the recent issues testify.

This last year, for instance, witnessed the resurrection of the hitherto sleepy Journal of Business into a magazine of amazing polish and sophistication. Working with such seemingly unpromising topics as "Accelerated Depreciation Guidelines" or "Linear Programming", the Journal dealt with the pressing questions of business theory and economy with a flair for good writing and good humour.

Humanities Magazine, that most mythical of journals, finally appeared on the stands in a format that would have put PMLA to shame. Contributions covered a wide area of disciplines and dealt with such topics as modern German philosophy, Latin poetry, and archeological excavations on the island of Iona.

The Stylus, by far the oldest and most venerable publication on campus, once again proved that age is no hinderance to freshness and originality. In a rare melange of the traditional, the esoteric, and the avant-garde the contributors have again distinguished themselves. Inspiration ranged from Africa to Athos, expression from the surrealist to the realistic.

The Cosmos, the most technical journal of the four, managed to produce a magazine of equally high quality though the humanists on campus were forced to admit they did not quite know what was going on inside its covers. The Cosmos editors had the scoop of the year as far as circulation is concerned since they received an official request from the Soviet Government to participate in the exchange program of Russian and American scientific journals.

SUB TURRI

We awoke one morning last spring and were confronted by the challenge of a new century—a challenge to measure up to and surpass the achievement and advancement recorded by Boston College during its first hundred years. And from all indications, the time was propitious for a reasoned reappraisal of what the ideals of the University are, where we stand, where we are going in the education of Christian men and women. The time was propitious for a program of change to meet the challenge.

In the wake of the Centennial Celebration—of speeches by Hans Küng and Augustin Cardinal Bea, by Nathan Marsh Pusey, representing the intellectual and educational world, and by our late beloved President John Fitzgerald Kennedy—the Arts and Sciences Self-Study was begun. That, together with the current University Development Program, indicated to most that we were to be dedicated to progress toward a new era of greatness in education.

As the hands of the clock on Gasson Tower brought to a close the first century of days and hours and minutes and the bells pealed out across the campus signaling the Turn of a Century at Boston College, the newly-appointed editors of the 1964 Sub Turri were already at work for they, too, with their staff, had a challenge to meet. The conception of what a yearbook should and must be has changed radically in the last decade; along with being a chronicle of facts and events it must also capture the tenor and tensions of the time. As the first book of the second century, we wanted it to be a pace-setter in originality and freshness of conception and design. We wanted to meet the challenge by imparting to our book a distinctive character and individuality which, in the past, it had so often lacked.

This statement, then, might be looked upon as an Apologia Pro Libera Nostra, a statement of intention and explanation for the changes you will see, and against which the finished product—our achievement—might be measured.

In over-all appearance, we have tried for a more colorful book with a fresher and freer layout, with an emphasis on modernity and even a hint, perhaps, of the avant-garde. To lend a greater interest and imaginativeness to the pictures, the use of formal portraits has been minimized and a greater stress has been placed on informal, "Smile, you're on Candid Camera!" shots.

Coupled with informal pictures in the Academics Section—in which we hope we have caught something of the personality of the professors and perhaps, even, some memorable eccentricity—we have included a brief statement from an interview with each Department Chairman in order to give some insight into what other departments in the University are doing to move forward with the new currents of thought and research in their fields.

Because of the growth and expansion of the University, a greater selectivity becomes increasingly important in the production of a “manageable” yearbook. This is apparent in the small percentage of faculty members who could be included in the Academics pages, and even more so in the Activities Section where many of the over one hundred campus organizations had to be omitted. Our standard has simply been to include those activities which, in the mind of the editorial staff, are performing the greatest service to the University, its students, and the community. And for the major organizations—rather than give a statistical round-up of facts and figures—the copy staff has tried to use a feature story type of write-up, a sort of “Time Cover Story” approach, hoping that the result is more interesting and memorable copy.

As the last pages of the book are being prepared for the publisher, it is spring again and time to announce the editors of the 1965 book. We hope that many of our innovations will have proved successful enough that they will see fit to incorporate them into the character of the next Sub Turri. For ourselves, the book will remain, together with the impressions and comments of the faculty and students—both favorable and critical—which any “new thing” naturally receives.

For the Students of the Class of 1964, we hope that this year’s Sub Turri will be looked upon in the years to come as a source of many memories, as an evocation of what have been harried but, for the most part, happy days—that it will be a thread tying us to our college years, a “Remembrance of Things Past.”

For the staff, it will be this and much more. It will be a thousand and one experiences garnered from working with divergent personalities having new and different ideas. It will be the memory of those deadly deadline days when journalism in McElroy 101 was at fever pitch; it will be the memory of the beer and pizza parties with the Beatles blaring out their latest chant to calm the tried and tired nerves of a willing but weary staff. Out of many—minds and ideas and arguments and agreements—there has again come one: the 1964 Sub Turri.

FALL

The 1963 Eagles entered the new season as a fresh and promising squad, led by All-America candidate Jack Concannon. Coach Jim Miller returned after completing a highly successful inaugural season as head football coach at Boston College. His promise of an "exciting" brand of football was widely publicized and eagerly anticipated.

This young team was molded to the proportions necessary to produce a fast-moving, wide-open attack with a hard-nosed defense. There was a talent-laden backfield, with enough power to provide three complete units. The pressing problem was a combination of inexperience and a lack of depth in the line. The fans predicted that the opener at Syracuse would be an indication of the ability and style of the team; the record of this game would be a clue to what the season would look like on December first.

Boston College
Staff

On September 21, nearly 5000 wildly loyal B.C. supporters traveled to witness the latest duel in the growing rivalry between the Eagles and the Orangemen of Syracuse. The brawny Syracuse line propelled the big Orange to a 19-0 half-time lead, and at the start of the fourth quarter the Eagles were behind 26-7. But Miller's charges rebounded as Jack Concannon led them to within five points of victory. He himself quickly accumulated 265 yards by dramatic passing and daring running. In the final two minutes of the game, however, an interception preserved the Syracuse lead and produced a 32-21 decision for the Orange.

The following weekend the Eagles played host to Wichita. The Shockers proved tough opposition for a B.C. team which had taken both a physical and psychological beating the previous Saturday. At the half the Eagles trailed 10-6. But in the second stanza Jim McGowan plunged for two scores, and the defense slowed a Wichita comeback. The final score was B.C. 22, Wichita 16.

Now with a win on the slate, the Millermen traveled to Detroit, where Coach Miller sought his second victory in as many clashes with his former charges. The defense had some trouble with Detroit's slashing ground game, but Concannon ran for two scores and set up a third, leading the Eagles to a 20-12 victory.

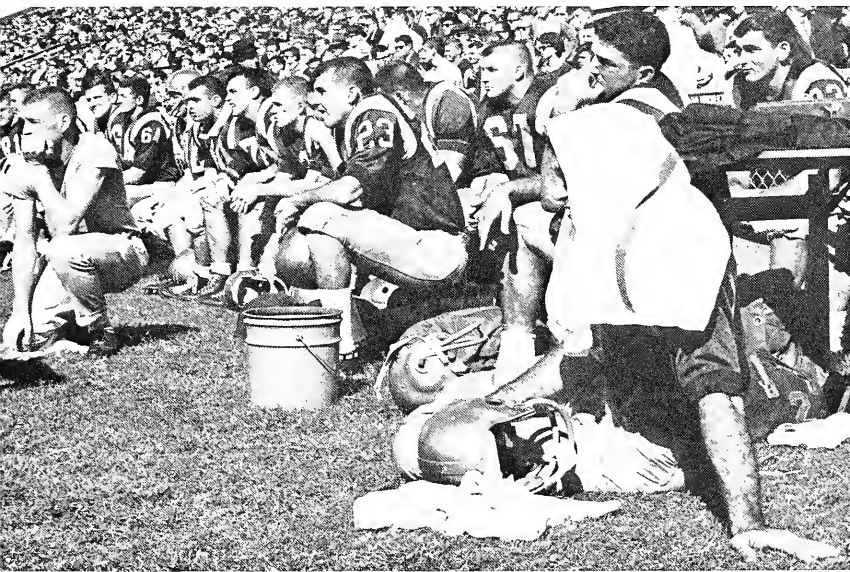

The Wildcats of Villanova were next on the B.C. schedule. As usual, the Villanovans came to the Heights with visions of victory dancing in their heads. For the fifth year in a row the Boston College team made them look like sleepwalkers. Once again it was Jack Concannon leading the Eagle attack to a 34-0 victory.

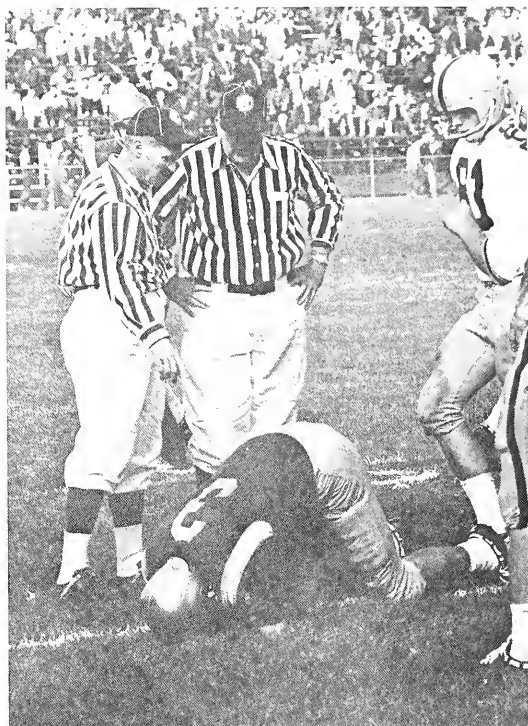

The Eagles then gathered up their 3-1 record and flew to Colorado Springs to battle the Falcons of the Air Force Academy. An aerial duel was the anticipated result of the clash of Terry Isaacson of the Academy and our own Jack Concannon. But Isaacson grounded his game, and early penalties broke the back of long air strikes engineered by Concannon. The Eagles could not completely recover. Late in the third quarter Jack showed the Air Force how an Eagle can fly, quickly passing most of the 68 yards to the only B.C. score. The final tally was a Falcon triumph, 34 to 7.

November second was Homecoming Day at the Heights, and Queen Kathy O'Brien and her court watched with a cold, damp crowd as the Eagles crushed the Commodores of Vanderbilt 19-6. For the first time in the season, the ground attack, led by John Walsh and Bob Budzinski, gathered big yardage through a desperate Vandy defense. Perhaps spurred on by the presence of girl cheerleaders for first time in B.C. football history, the Eagle defense closed in to make the Vanderbilt defeat decisive.

The University of Buffalo scheduled Boston College as part of its "re-emphasis" on football. When the Bulls arrived on November 9 they brought with them a torrential rainstorm. In an amazing display of pinpoint passing, Jack Concannon, with 219 yards of total offense, led the Eagles to a 15-0 half-time lead. The unforgettable weather that marked the second half blinded the confused Bulls, who were unable to move in the morass of Alumni Field. But the rains did what Buffalo could not—they stopped Concannon. So the result was a damp and well-deserved 15-0 win for B.C.

On November 16, another southern team arrived to test our New England hospitality. This time it was the Cavaliers of the University of Virginia, and they brought with them a series of running plays which kept the game interesting from beginning to end. Once again, Jack displayed the "cannon" in Concannon; his total offense for the day was a phenomenal 299 yards. He directed the Eagles to the 30-21 victory and the second unbeaten home season since Alumni Stadium was built in 1957. Bob Shann was another standout in the game. He scored two touchdowns, one of them on his runback after an interception, and set up a Marty DiMezza field goal with a 50 yard scamper.

The Holy Cross team that awaited the Eagles in Worcester for the season's traditional climax had a 1-6-1 banner on its lance. But those eight games taken together were not a fraction as important as this last one. The Crusaders appeared on the field in new uniforms, with optimism in their souls and a bitter wind at their backs.

Late in the first quarter, on a fourth and five from the Eagles own six, a high pass from center slipped into the end zone and an automatic safety put the Cross ahead 2-0. The Eagles threatened twice in the second stanza and once in the third, but the paralyzing cold and a dogged Holy Cross defense blunted the attack. Concannon was contained and his receivers carefully covered. In the fourth quarter Jim Marcellino smashed half the length of the field on a series of downs that produced the game's only touchdown, and the "Atrocity of Atrocities" was complete.

At season's end the ledger read 6 wins and 3 losses. Jim Miller had hexed the "sophomore jinx" and directed the young Eagles to a successful season. The Eagle attack was both colorful and productive, and the continuation of this exciting style of football guarantees B.C. fans many exhilarating afternoons in the seasons still unplayed.

The 1963 Boston College Cross Country team was comprised of a conglomeration of sprinters, hurdlers, field event, and middle distance men, with only two bona fide distance runners. Captain Tom Meagher and Phil Jutras distinguished themselves as two of the top harriers in the area, and the team proved itself with wins over such formidable teams as Boston University, Tufts, Brandeis, and Fairfield.

Jutras, the outstanding junior from Manchester, New Hampshire, was beaten only twice in dual meet competition. In the Greater Boston Meet—the most important of the season—Jutras was just barely beaten for the first position, with Meagher finishing a strong fourth. The New England Championship was the outstanding meet of the season for Jutras, who fought his way to fifth position after a slow start.

Paul Delaney, Peter Marx, Henry Keller, John Carroll, Bob Gilvey, Charlie Babin, Lucien Tessier, and Mike Conley supported Meagher and Jutras with many fine performances throughout the season. Special mention should be made of sophomores Delaney and Marx, junior Gilvey, and senior Keller, all of whom share credit for the team's .500 season.

Hockey supporters at the Heights looked forward to the 1963-64 season with justifiable reservations. The Eagle fans had faith in Coach "Snooks" Kelley; however, they could not help but realize that the majority of last season's talented icemen had been lost via graduation. Only Captain Tom Apprille and four other seniors returned, so that out of necessity much of the burden would fall upon the shoulders of the less experienced underclassmen. Fortunately, however, these young Eagles responded brilliantly as B.C. proceeded to average nearly five goals per game in rolling up an impressive 18-8-1 record which secured a number three rating in the East and a berth in the E.C.A.C. playoffs.

The surprising Eagles started the season on the right foot by decisively capturing five consecutive victories. Opening the season at Brown, four different players hit the cords in the third period as B.C. posted a 4-1 decision over the Bruins. The icemen then returned to the Heights for their initial appearance at McHugh Forum; the opponent was Providence College which was destined to be rated the number one team in the East. That night, however, the Friars were vastly outplayed as Cunniff, Dyer, Flaherty, and Downes slipped the puck past Providence goaltender Jim Campbell for another 4-1 victory.

The Huskies of Northeastern then provided stiff opposition before succumbing 4-2 on the strength of third period goals by Jim Mullen and John Cunniff. When B.C. encountered St. Lawrence, our traditional nemesis, superior team depth carried the Maroon and Gold to their fourth straight win, as again four different men found the scoring mark. Princeton became the first shut-out victim as Captain Tom Apprille frustrated the skating Tigers by turning aside 30 shots on goal.

While most of the students were spending the Christmas vacation at home, the Maroon and Gold journeyed to New York City to defend their championship of the E.C.A.C. Christmas Tournament. In the opening round, the unbeaten Eagles encountered a strong Army team which was also undefeated.

The Eagles stormed the Cadet net and at the final buzzer the Black Knights of the Hudson had been outfought 10-2. Eddie Downes and John Cunniff spearheaded the Eagle attack as they each picked up one goal and three assists. Seniors Dave Duffy and Paul Lufkin also stood out in a game which received excellent press coverage in the New York papers. The next night, however, in the Tourney final the young Eagles were taught a lesson by the seasoned veterans of Clarkson's Green Machine. The Canadians seemed very much at home on the Madison Square Garden ice as they did everything right to earn a 9-3 decision over the B.C. sextet.

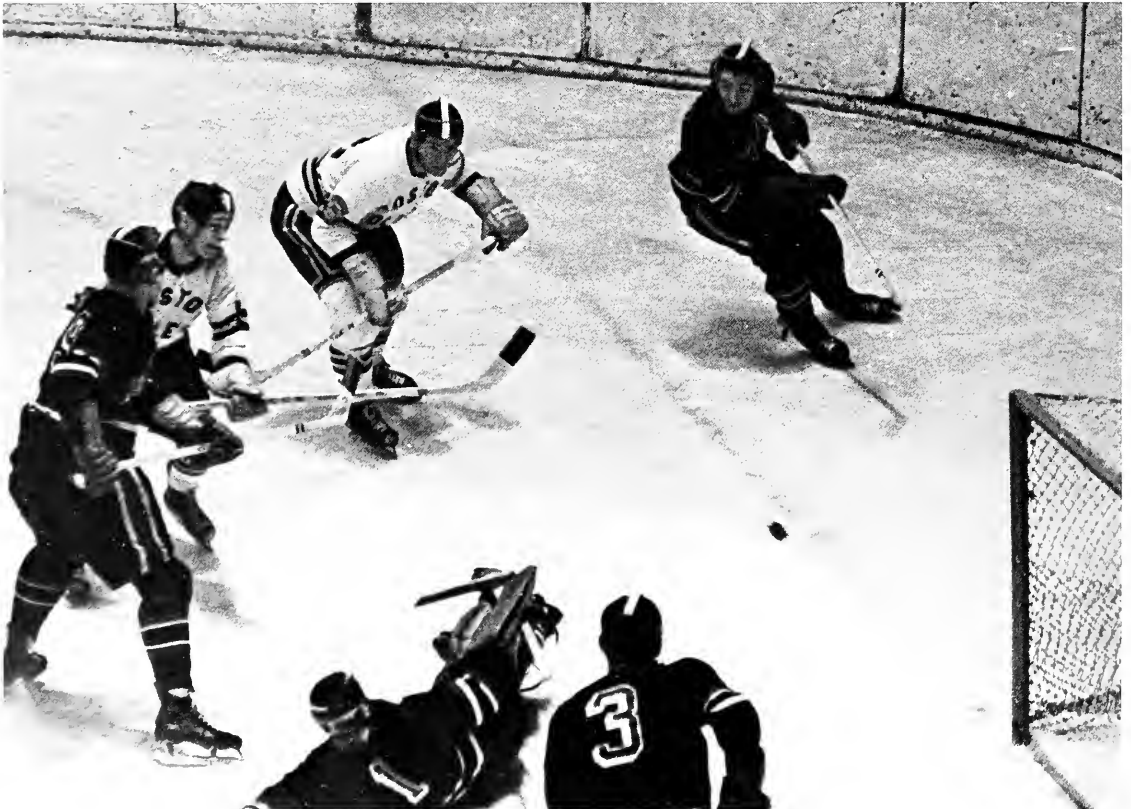

"This won't hurt a bit!"

The squad then tried Boston Garden and an encounter with the University of Toronto. Unfortunately the result was about the same and the Eagles might have wondered if they hadn't accidentally encountered the Maple Leafs instead!

B.C. quickly bounced back, however, and turned back McGill and Loyola Universities as the Christmas vacation drew to a close. McGill fell 6-2 and Loyola 9-2 as the high scoring line of John Marsh, John Cuniff and Phil Dyer sparked the offense by accounting for 8 goals.

Next on the agenda was the annual upstate New York trip to St. Lawrence and Clarkson. Against St. Lawrence the Eagles scored quickly as Moylan, Flaherty, Mullen and Dyer blitzed the harassed Larrie goalie for four first period goals. Nevertheless, the game was a tight one as the Larries fought back before bowing 6-5. The game with Clarkson was also a close one, but this time the Eagles were on the short end by a 4-3 count. It was a heartbreaker since the Maroon and Gold had to watch their 3-point lead evaporate. B.C.'s next opponent was the Harvard Crimson and as usual the Forum was filled to capacity. B.C. fans were disappointed that night as they saw a fired-up Harvard squad set back the Eagles 4-2.

Then to make matters worse our "Commonwealth cousins" from B.U. handed B.C. its third straight loss as the Terriers netted the winning goal in overtime for a 6-5 decision. Thus "Snooks" Kelley welcomed the examination break as our previously high-flying Eagles had suddenly become entangled in a mid-season slump.

Dartmouth College provided the opposition as the second half of the season began. Only the 36-save performance of Brewster Gere saved the Indians from a rout as B.C. skated off with a 4-2 triumph. Cunniff, Dyer, and Marsh each scored once to pace the attack.

The next game loomed as one of the season's biggest for the Eagles as they travelled to Providence to face the Friars who had gone undefeated since their initial loss to B.C. The fans who filled the Providence Arena will not soon forget the fantastic third period offensive display which these two teams exhibited. Trailing 3-2 as the third period began, the Eagle sextet scored two quick goals to take a short-lived lead. The scoreboard then reacted as though it had faulty wiring for the next twenty minutes. The scoreboard was accurate, however, as 12 goals were registered in all. The final tally—Providence 9, Boston College 8. Jim Mullen, Eddie Downes and Paul Lufkin accounted for 5 goals in a losing effort.

Next on display at the Forum were the Green Knights of Clarkson who already owned two early season victories over the Maroon and Gold. Coach Kelley aroused his Eagles to a fever pitch and, to the delight of an S.R.O. crowd, Canadian-laden Clarkson fell by a 5-1 count. Dave Duffy's first period goal ignited the B.C. attack and the Eagles were never behind. This game marked the Eagles' finest hour. It also marked the beginning of a six-game winning streak.

Brien finds Duff a pain in the neck, arm, side, . . .

First to fall were Northeastern's Huskies who were outscored by a 7-4 count in the Beanpot opener. Next the Bulldogs of Yale were defeated by a 5-1 score in their new home rink. The Eagles then defeated a good Colgate team 6-1 as John Cunniff picked up the hat trick and linemates Phil Dyer and John Marsh each scored once.

The stage was not set for a rematch of the two Kelleys in the Beanpot final. Sparked by John Cunniff's goal, which came with B.C. short-handed, the B.C. sextet soared to a 6-4 lead and preserved an exciting 6-5 victory. This marked the third Beanpot for B.C. in the past four years. Captain Tom Apprille, Ralph Toran, and John Cunniff were named to the All-Tourney team. Cunniff was named the Most Valuable Player of the Tourney.

The B.C. sextet continued its explosive attack against the Colby College Mules who provided little resistance to the high flying Eagles as they were trounced by a 13-1 score. John Moylan and John Marsh each had hat tricks in leading an amazing offensive array which saw every player but two hit the scoring column.

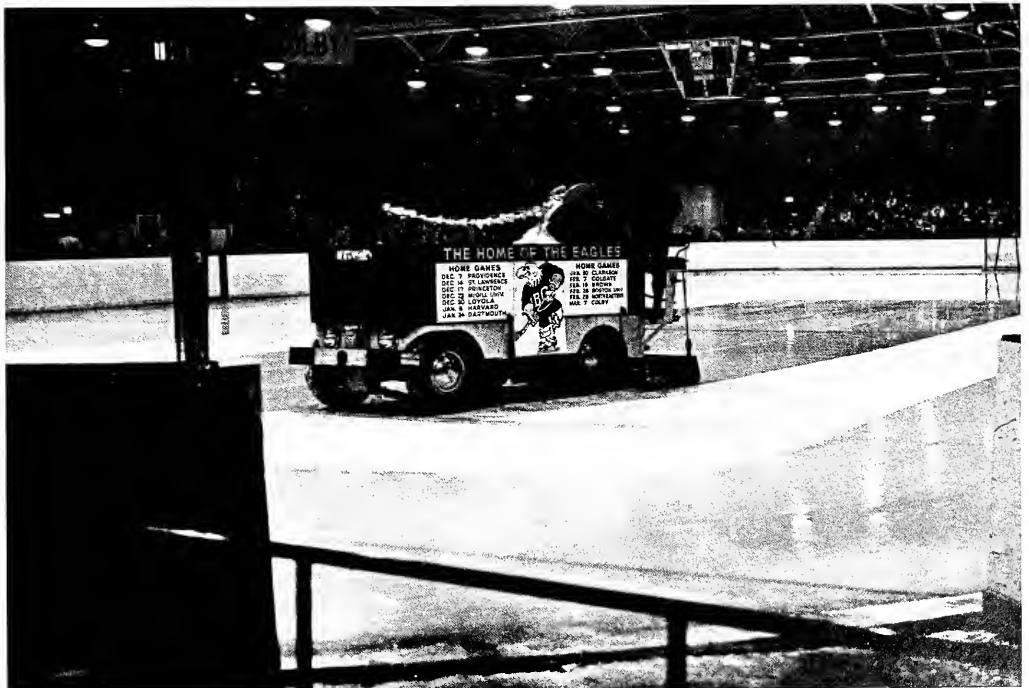

The following game against Brown seemed to check the momentum that the Maroon and Gold had built up during the previous three weeks. Though Boston College escaped with a 4-4 tie, they seemed to be a different hockey club for the remainder of the season. They were humbled by the Army team which they had humiliated earlier in the season. The inevitable happened in the succeeding game as B.U. won the rubber match of the series 1-0.

Thankfully, the Eagles did rebound as they nipped Northeastern and trounced Colby in the final two regular season games for B.C.'s 17th and 18th victories of the year.

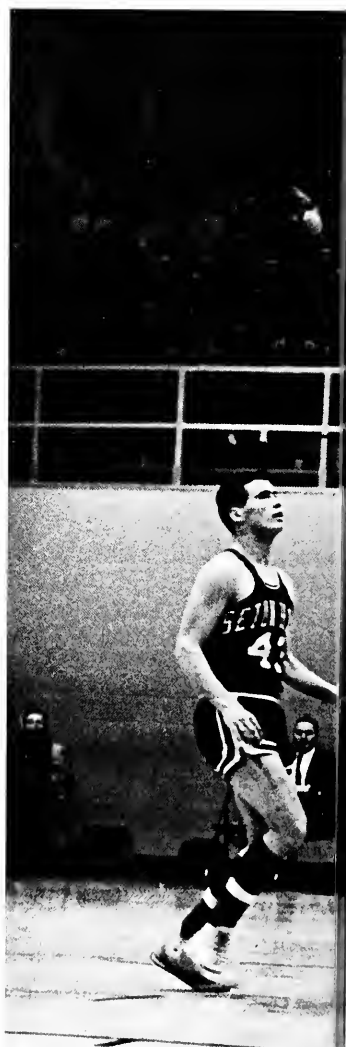

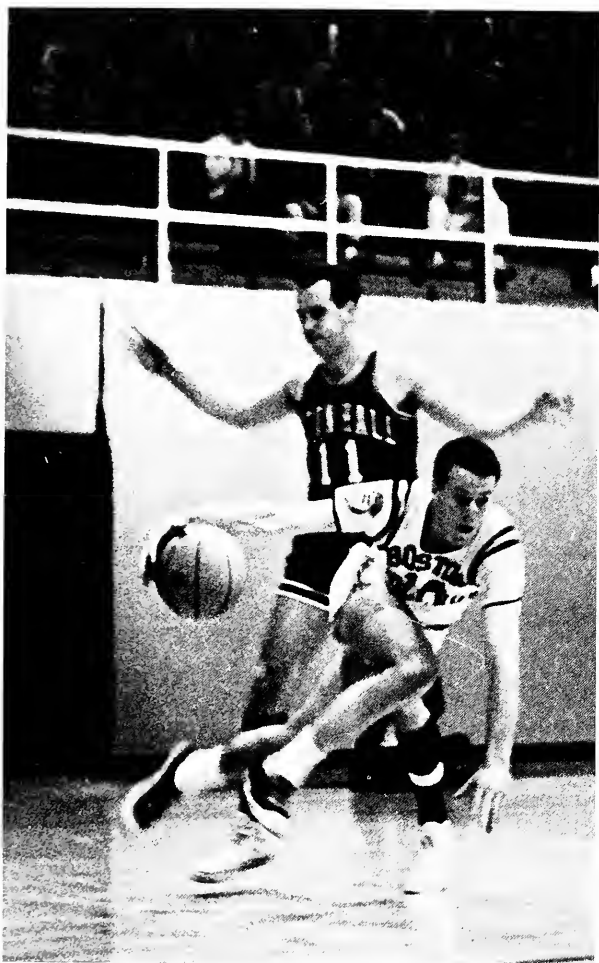

The Maroon and Gold officially ended their season with a hard fought 3-2 defeat to R.P.I., a contender for the National Championship.

Boston College's basketball fortunes were in a precarious position with the arrival of the 1963-64 season. Sports fans across the nation enviously watched the arrival at the Heights of Bob Cousy, "Mr. Basketball", who was to take over the coaching reins of the B.C. Eagles. That in itself was cause for optimism to some observers, but for most, including Coach Cousy himself, any prognostication had to be made very cautiously. "The Cooz" was familiar with the B.C. personnel and realized that since the nucleus of last year's team had graduated, he could only depend upon Captain George Fitzsimmons, veterans Bob Furbush and Jerry Power and the promising sophomore John Austin.

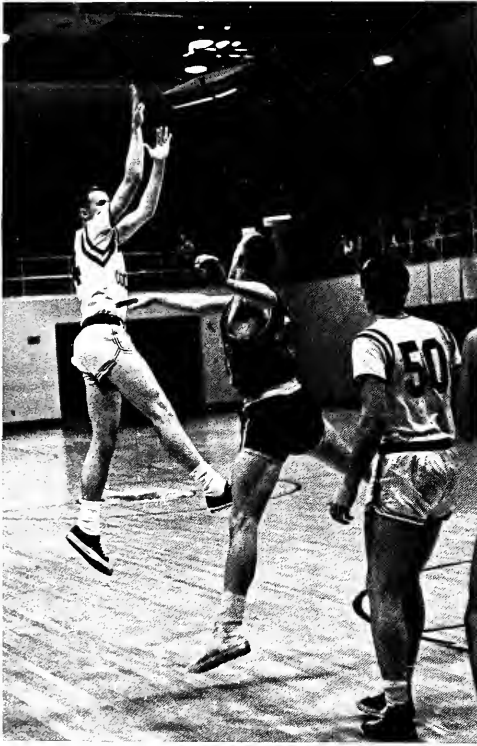

Nevertheless, everyone seemed to be looking forward to the season and, finally, in mid-October practice sessions began. The press, naturally, was eager for stories but Coach Cousy concerned himself with going right to work. Both he and the team worked diligently throughout the month of November as our renowned mentor patiently tried to introduce a new style of play on the Heights. It was unquestionably a difficult task, for any team would have trouble adapting itself to the demanding speed and hectic pace of Bob Cousy's "fast-break" offense. Coach Cousy knew it would take time but was hopeful the hardwood Eagles would find themselves as early as possible during the season ahead.

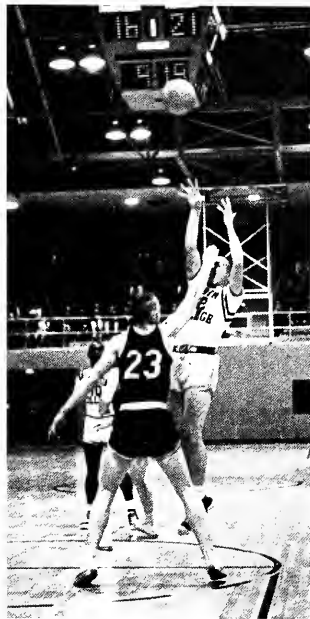

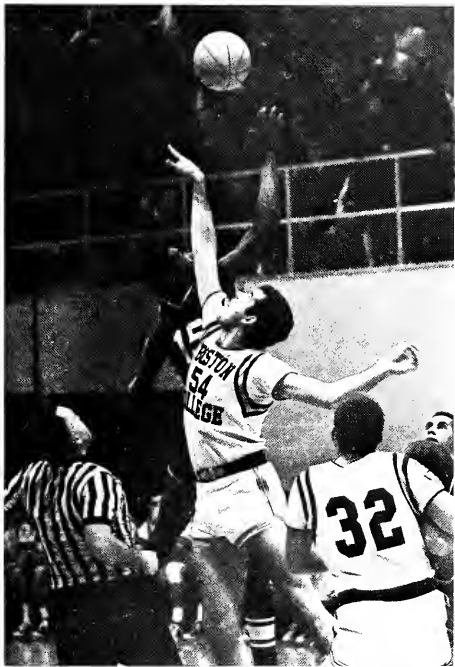

It was December 6—the day of the season opener—and a sellout crowd packed Roberts Center to see the debut of Bob Cousy's roundball Eagles against the impressive Stags of Fairfield University. Syndicated writers and photographers lined the court to cover the game for the national press services and the nation's top sports periodicals.

The high-spirited Eagles were scrappy and looked good in spots against the Stags, but it was evident after losing 69-63 that they would need more time before they would be able to utilize their running game effectively.

One of the problems at that time was a lack of rebounding strength; and this showed itself again in the next two games as the Eagles bowed to this year's two Yankee Conference powers—UConn. and UMass. Then with the Christmas season coming, the Eagles copped their first victory of the season by defeating Colby 97-80. John Austin, B.C.'s most promising soph, scored 28 in this well-rounded effort for the Eagles. The Eagles then made it two in a row by downing Bill Sharman's Westerners from Los Angeles State 94-83.

Next on the slate was the E.C.A.C. tournament in Philadelphia where the B.C. cagers almost scored a major upset while John Austin drew raves from the Quaker City fans. It was B.C. versus highly rated St. Bonaventure in the first round; and John Austin (33 points) teamed with Captain George Fitzsimmons and senior Jerry Power to rattle the Bonnies and cut their 17 point lead to 3 before time ran out with B.C. down 77-74. B.C. then found Temple tougher going, but John Austin netted 27 points in that one and in the process a spot on the All-Tourney team as well.

After New Year's Day the B.C. hoopmen hopefully journeyed to upstate New York only to be turned back by a determined and hot-shooting Canisius club 98-82. The Eagles returned to the Heights to face Brandeis and proceeded to drub the Judges 95-67. In this last outing before the exam period layoff Austin, Power, and Humann outshot the Judges in the first half while Tom Kelly and Ed Hockenbury led in the second half.

After exams the Eagles vented their pent-up feelings on the hapless Indians of Dartmouth 93-62. Coach Cousy was pleased with this one as it helped set the stage for B.C.'s next encounter with the hungry Huskies of Northeastern University. This game created a wealth of interest locally and an overflow crowd assembled at the Northeastern gym to watch a cool B.C. quintet whip the Huskies 95-84. Solid performances came from Austin, Papoula, Humann, and Captain George Fitzsimmons. It appeared that the Eagles had finally started to jell as they entered upon the final month of the season. However, Holy Cross then dazed the Eagles in the Worcester Auditorium with superior rebounding and hot hands from the floor. That game slowed the Eagles' pace, and tourney-bound Providence and Army were quick to take advantage of it by handily setting back the Maroon and Gold hoopmen. These losses failed to dampen the B.C. spirit, however, as B.C. fans marveled at John Austin's 32 point performance against the Friars and his 39 point effort against the Cadets of Army.

Next on the slate was the opening of the local Beanpot Tournament which saw the Huskies from Northeastern trip the Eagles 73-71. This loss hurt the Eagles' pride but, in the final analysis, it was the game which Coach Cousy used to shock his charges into playing sound basketball. Thus the Eagles, anxious to avenge this defeat, eagerly traveled to Fordham where—much to Bob Cousy's delight—they exploded against the Rose Hill Rams and came home with the victory by a 96-90 count. Here it was evident that the young Eagles had finally matured. John Ezell rebounded brilliantly and Bob Furbush and John Austin shattered the Fordham defenses with 31 and 34 points respectively.

Against Tufts for third place in the Beanpot, the Eagles once again caught fire behind, John Ezell's 17 rebounds and 16 points. John Austin was again high man with 32 points; Jerry Power had 14 and soph Charlie Chaney 10 as the Eagles soared to a 105-75 win against the Jumbos. The true test, however, came in the following game against Georgetown and the soaring Eagles passed with flying colors as they out-hustled the Hoyas 107-92. Every Eagle did his job in this one—"Zelmo" was tough underneath, Jerry Power exhibited his excellence as a floor general, Bob Furbush frustrated Georgetown's Jim Christy, and John Austin tossed in 49 points to establish a new B.C. single game record.

The team now felt ready for another shot at Holy Cross and the "new look" Eagles almost turned the tables on the Crusaders before falling short 88-84. B.C. outshot the Crusaders from the floor but failed to match the Purple from the free throw line. The Eagles now aimed for 4 out of 5 against the Pirates of Seton Hall. Once more a strong team effort proved effective as B.C. placed 5 men in double figures and overcame Nick Werkman and Co. 105-93. B.C. was in command all the way as John Ezell gathered in 17 rebounds to put the fast break into high gear. And then it was time for the big one, the final game of the season against N.I.T. hopeful Boston University. B.U. wanted this one but John Austin and Jerry Power kept B.C. in the game as the Terriers desperately attempted to pull away. Then late in the game the clutch play of George Fitzsimmons turned the lead over to B.C., but with 23 seconds left B.U. tied it up and Bobby Ward fouled out after playing well defensively against B.U.'s Randy Cross. Coach Cousy went to the bench and chose Jim Nelson to replace Ward. Shortly after, the slim junior drew a foul with three seconds remaining and calmly converted his free throw attempt to give B.C. a 61-60 decision over our Beantown rivals.

The Boston College Rifle Team is one of the minor sports at B.C. which does not arouse campus-wide interest but which is, nevertheless, important in extending the name of the school in the field of sports. This year's team is led by senior Dick Morse and had compiled a very creditable record midway through the season.

Under the auspices of the R.O.T.C., the team travels to various parts of New England to compete in a number of matches during the winter and spring. In early March, the Rifle Team competed at the Coast Guard Academy and achieved the enviable position of placing second out of seven teams in competition.

RIFLE TEAM

SKI TEAM

Although the Boston College Ski Team is recognized officially by the school, it is a minor sport and, as such, receives only limited financial assistance. Members not only train themselves but supply their own equipment as well. However, if the team desires to attend a meet, the school does underwrite their expenses.

The 1963-64 season saw little change from the previous year, with the personnel remaining basically the same as that of the 1962-63 team. Again Andy Domenick captained the group, which was comprised mainly of members of the Class of '64. The Eagles' Ski Team competed in few meets and, due mainly to a lack of coaching, did not challenge Eastern ski supremacy, which rests securely in the hands of Middlebury and Dartmouth. The events in which B.C. skiers did participate were the men's downhill slalom and the giant slalom races, in which the emphasis is placed on speed and maneuverability.

The Boston College wrestling team completed its third year as a recognized minor varsity sport by posting a 28-10 victory over Emerson College. This win brought the Eagles' mat record to 6-3 for the season. This must be considered a fine record for a team which has had little match experience in previous years. Coach Jim Maloney built the team around a core of seniors who filled six of the eight weight classes. Those graduating include Jeff Cates, Roger Eastman, and Jack Flanagan.

B.C.'s first venture to the New England Wrestling Championships was a satisfying one for Coach Maloney. Although the Eagles did not win any class crowns, they placed in three of the weight classes. The achievement of two fourth places and a fifth place finish may be regarded as a promise of better things to come.

As the 1963 baseball season opened Coach Eddie Pellagrini found himself in an unfamiliar position. For the two previous seasons Pellagrini had been blessed with a fine mound corps and a stingy defense. Those clubs had depended upon speed and finesse to provide runs. Now the situation was reversed. The pitching staff consisted largely of inexperienced sophomores and juniors while, on the other hand, the 1963 club was loaded with hitting talent. This Eagle nine promised to be one of the youngest B.C. teams in recent years. Only three seniors, Captain Bob DeFelice, slugger Art Graham, and third baseman Jim Buccigross, were assured of starting positions.

On opening day senior hurler Jack McGann started the Eagles off on the right foot as B.C. subdued M.I.T. 10-6. McGann was also selected to face B.C.'s second opponent, Brandeis; he answered the call by turning back the Judges 10-3. The pattern for the season was beginning to emerge as Buccigross, Graham, junior second sacker John Frame, and soph Jim McGowan led a blistering offense which produced 21 hits and 20 runs in two games.

The Eagles then entertained the Terriers of B.U. at Commander Shea Field. B.U. found B.C.'s hospitality to be something less than desirable, however, as the final tally was B.C. 13—B.U. 8. The bats quieted slightly, but junior moundsman Jack Concannon was impressive as Tufts fell, 6-4. The Peacocks of St. Peter's arrived from Jersey City only to witness the reawakening of Eagle bat power. Art Graham's two home runs paced a 14 hit attack which netted a 13-8 victory. B.C.'s "southern swing" took them to Providence where the booming bats led B.C. to a 9-5 win over the Friars.

Thus B.C.'s record stood at 6-0. The team batting average was .300 and run production had soared to an amazing 61 in six games.

After a 6-1 loss to Northeastern, Buddy Carter twirled a seven hitter to defeat Springfield 6-1. Pitching remained strong as the diamondmen swept past B.U. and Tufts by scores of 5-2 and 7-5 respectively. Then, in a game which had been postponed earlier by rain, the Jawsns of Harvard handed B.C. their first whitewashing of the season, 5-0.

A trip to Hanover, New Hampshire, reawakened the Boston College bats as a 15 hit attack stunned the Indians 12-8. Twelve more hits produced 11 runs and an 11-8 triumph over the Huskies of Northeastern.

An unscheduled doubleheader with Holy Cross proved to be ill-timed as the Purple took two, 4-0 and 7-4. However, a return engagement on Memorial Day was quite successful as Jack McGann led the senior rebellion by spinning a 3-hitter and connecting for 2 safeties himself. Buccigross, DeFelice, and Graham also hit safely to set back the Cross 6-3.

June 1 found the Eagle nine at Amherst. The Lord Jeffs greeted the Maroon and Gold with a 10 hit attack which sent the B.C. forces to their fifth defeat, 10-6.

The final games of the season were the traditional Alumni weekend encounters with Holy Cross. At home, Jack Concannon shut out the Crusaders 3-0, allowing only 4 hits. The Cross took the final encounter, but this still left the season's ledger at a very satisfying 13 wins and 6 losses.

The final statistics revealed some interesting facts. Four of the eight regulars in the B.C. lineup were batting over .300 at the end of the 19-game slate. Junior John Frame led all hitters with a .364 mark, followed by sophomore leftfielder Jim McGowan at .357, Jim Buccigross at .350, and Bob DeFelice at .323. Art Graham, while under .300 made over half of his season's hits good for extra bases. Sophomore rightfielder Bill Mulcahy showed great promise as he hit close to .400 for the first twelve games of the season and was an excellent ballhawk.

Seniors Buccigross, Graham, and DeFelice will be missed as defensive specialists as well as batsmen. De-Felice, in particular, was the field general who directed the B.C. moundsmen.

The pitching staff matured as the season progressed and fine performances were given by Jack McGann, Jack Concannon, Buddy Carter, and Dick Beauchesne. This year's staff will undoubtedly benefit greatly from the experience they received in the 1963 campaign.

SAILING

Varsity sailing, as an inter-collegiate sport, is considered minor on the Boston College campus. Yet for the devotees of the sport, it consumes a major portion of their time during the spring and fall seasons. Practice sessions twice weekly at M.I.T. and meets virtually every weekend provide the team members with ample opportunities to combine the physical coordination and the understanding of weather necessary to produce a successful season.

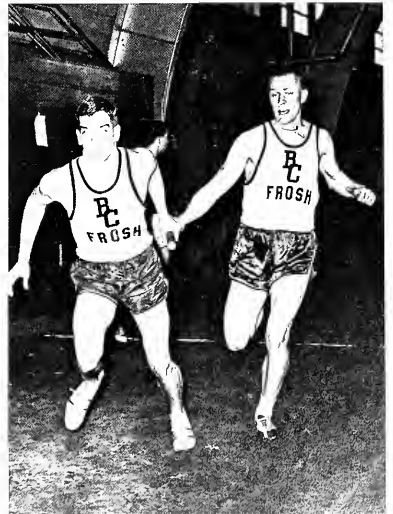

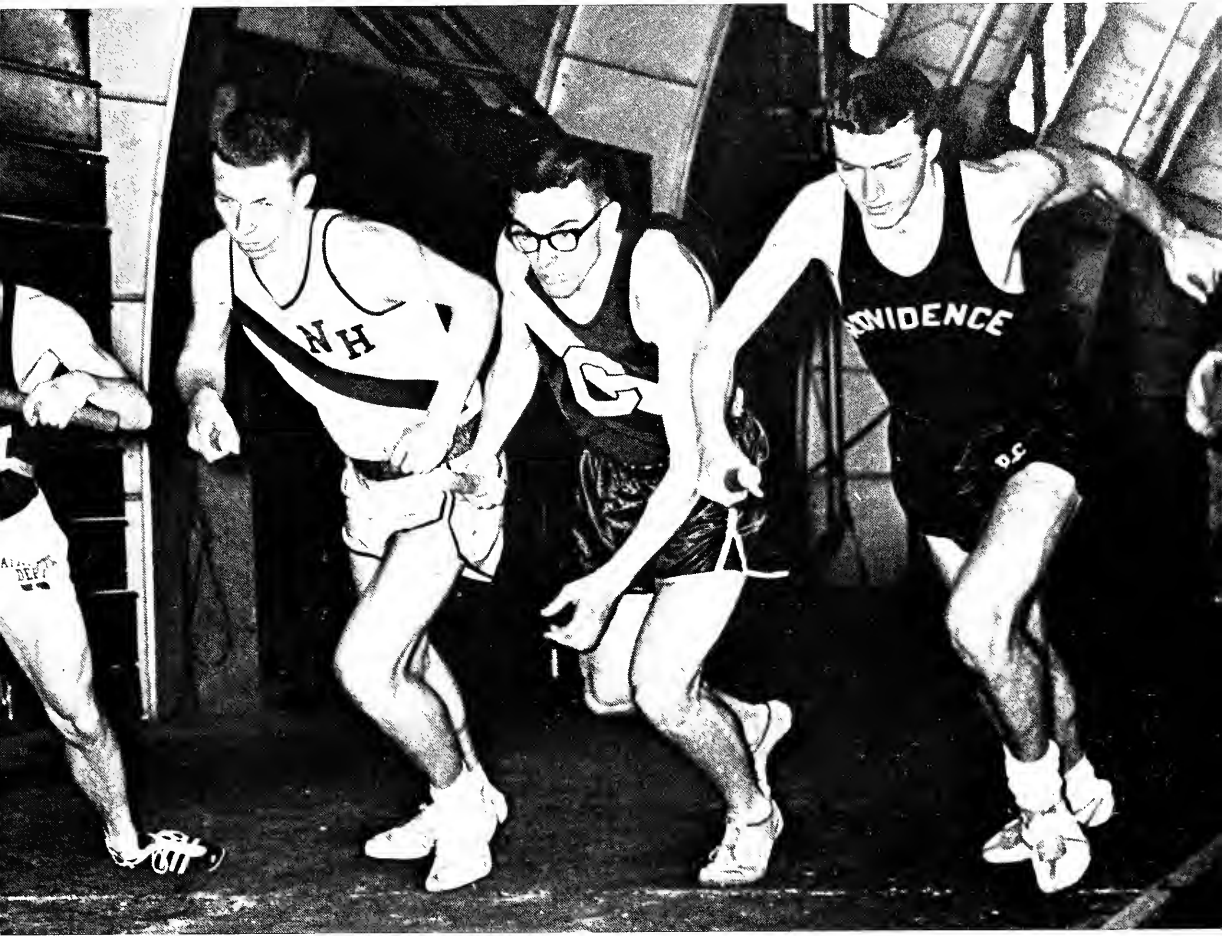

The winds roared last spring and so did the sailing team. Under the leadership of Commodore Bob Otlewski and Vice Commodore Joe Aliano, varsity sailing enjoyed one of the most successful seasons since its inauguration at Boston College. Much credit must be given to last year's seniors Mike Hanna and Doug Magde who consistently were among the leaders at all meets.

Last fall, with the departure of the expert seniors, the team looked to the task of building. The weather, once again, proved ideal but, concentrating on training, the record fell far below the peak of the spring season. Now, with the training period over, members such as Dick Capp, Jack Howard, and Todd and Jeff Brabec look forward to another successful spring.

TRACK

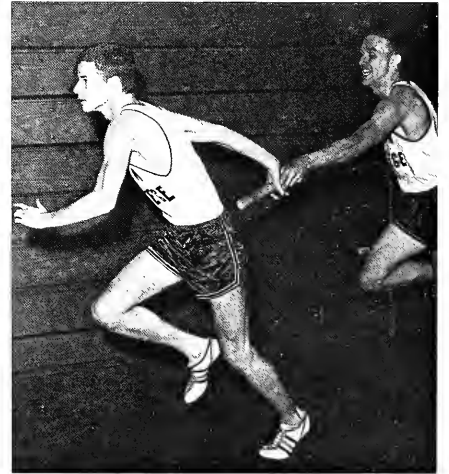

The track season opened on December 8 with B.C. losing a close contest to the strongest M.I.T. team ever. Several outstanding individual performances were turned in, but it was clearly evident in this and succeeding meets that lack of depth was a strong determining factor. This opening meet was followed by a victory over Tufts, losses to Brown and Northeastern, a third-place finish in the Greater Boston Meet, and a twelfth in the IC4A meet.

The big Invitational Meet drew out the best in the B.C. trackmen. Our mile relay team, composed of Lucien Tessier, Tom Meagher, Charlie Babin, and Bob Gilvey scored impressive victories in the BAA Meet, in the Milrose Games, and in the New York A.C. Meet, took second in the Philadelphia Enquirer Games, and culminated the indoor season with a fifth in the IC4A Meet. Senior broadjumper Hank Keller placed second in the K. of C. and the New England AAU Meets and third in the IC4A's breaking the B.C. record. John Fiore placed in several of these meets in the weight throw and sprint competition, and Lucien Tessier was undefeated until slowed by a muscle pull late in the season. Captain Tom Meagher, seniors Brian Maloney and Mike Crowley, juniors Jerry Govatsos, Phil Jutras and John Carroll, and sophs Babin, Conley and Delaney scored many points throughout the year keeping the senior manager busy all the time recording their times and distances.

Junior Paul Connolly's hurdling, classmate Dick Clarke's highjumping, and a fine freshman team will assure Coaches Bill Gilligan and Walter Shields future teams that will reach new heights on the Heights.

GOLF TEAM

With four of last year's starting seven men returning to the 1964 Boston College Golf Team, Coach Ed Carroll looked forward to a successful season. Last fall, the Eagles won the Greater Boston Championship for the first time in history. In addition to Captain Tom Chisholm, the powerful Eagle squad featured long-hitting Jim Sullivan, Pete Lynch, sophomore Jim Kehoe, juniors Matt O'Brien, Paul Chabot, Dick Kelly, Dick Sgarzi, and Jack Kennedy, and senior Jim MacDonald. B.C. will be matching shots this spring with such rugged powerhouses as West Point, Harvard, Dartmouth, Providence, Boston University and arch-rival Holy Cross. The Eagles will make Charles River Country Club their home course and will be shooting to win the New England Inter-Collegiate Championship in Rutland, Vermont, from May 7 through May 9.

There are few earthly things more splendid than a University. In these days of broken frontiers and collapsing values—when every future looks somewhat grim, and every ancient foothold has become something of a quagmire, wherever a University stands, it stands and shines; wherever it exists, the free minds of men, urged on to full and fair inquiry, may still bring wisdom into human affairs.

MODERATOR

Perhaps it is not too pretentious to say that a yearbook seeks to capture the spirit of a particular group of people at a particular time in a particular place. It tries to discover the peculiar identity which belongs to that group because of the convergence in time and space of so many individual identities. The staff of the 1964 Sub Turri faced this search for identity with some trepidation. Boston College is a large university and to it has come a large and diverse group of individual identities. It is to the everlasting glory of the University and to the temporary annoyance of the yearbook staff that these people cannot agree on the identity which belongs to them as a group. From this lack of agreement springs the yearbook's indecision as to its own identity.

A yearbook can, of course, be defined quite strictly and scientifically by the form it takes. The 1964 Sub Turri was published by Foote and Davies, Inc., of Atlanta, Georgia, a division of McCall, Inc. The Warren Kay Vantine Studio of Boston was commissioned to take the senior portraits. The book's 448 pages are printed on 80 lb. No. 1 Double Coated Enamel paper. The text uses 10 point Times Roman type, while the captions are in 8 point Times Roman and the headings in 30 point 20th Century Extra Bold Condensed.

But this kind of definition no more gives the identity of a yearbook than a mere description of Boston College's physical plant furnishes us with the identity of the University. The yearbook, like the University, receives its true identity from the people who are a part of it. Insofar as the yearbook staff represents the class, the identity they have given to this book mirrors the identity of the class. If some people are unhappy with the yearbook, it is because of the fortunate diversity and lack of agreement within the University and its eighty-eighth graduating class. In any case, it is to the people who made the book and to those others whom they represent that the 1964 Sub Turri belongs.

If the problem of defining a yearbook is both difficult and confusing, that of editing one is no less so. The help that is given in this task must be both appreciated and acknowledged. Such acknowledgement must be given to Mr. William Sloane of Foote and Davies and to the staff of Vantine Studios, whose expert advice contributed immeasurably to whatever professional quality is in the book. Rev. John P. McNamara, S.J., our moderator, gave his own invaluable aid by being just that—a moderator. Fr. Galvin and the staff of McElroy Commons showed a rare patience and understanding of the problems of a student publication and the necessity for late nights and overflowing wastebaskets. Mr. John Larner of Public Relations and Mr. Eddie Miller of the Athletic Association also deserve recognition for their assistance in so many ways. The Registrars of the various schools cheerfully provided information without which the book simply could not have been published. The contributions of the patrons and advertisers were equally essential to the success of this effort.

No catalogue of indebtedness would be complete without mentioning what the 1964 Sub Turri owes to its staff. In times of irritating complacency, flaming disagreement, and amazing energy they have always contributed not only their time and effort but also—and more importantly from at least one point of view—their unflagging sense of humor. Even in the threatening shadow of an impending deadline the editing of the yearbook remained a joy because of the people with whom it was done.
